HERRINGTON WARNER & GRANGE,

Brilliant Musical Production

By 80th Battalion Band At Belleville

It was a capacity house that greeted the initial concert appearance of the 80th Battalion Band, C.E.F., at Grif-fin's Opera House on Tuesday night.

Belleville has been singularly fortunate in the past in the calibre of their concerts. It is doubtful if any event of the kind ever more visibly stirred and gripped its audience than did this musical treat.

Bandmaster Stares has a splendid band, and the band has in him a splendid conductor. His interpretations are marked by a strong, intense, individual personality, and is backed by a thorough knowledge of music.
He is always sincere, conscientious,
true to himself and the work in hand.

The choice of the 80th Band in their assisting artist was a happy one. Miss Victoria Stares, of Hamilton, possesses a clear, sweet soprano voice and sings with ease of production, accurate intonation, symmetry of phrasing, and a general style that never departs from refinement. The choice of songs was one of the pleasing features of the evening, and met with genuine approval. On one occasion when Miss Stares responded to one of many encores by giving "Annie Laurie" everyone present was thoroughly delighted, and applauded vociferously.

The opening number on the programme was the ever-favorite Overture, "William Tell," and was played magnificently. The overture opens very quietly in a movement which depicts morning. The reed section of the band showed up beautifully here in their sustained nice quality, and the tympani effects which are introduced represented the distant rumbling of thunder in a most realistic manner. From this movement the overture goes into a soft strain, which very gradually increases in volume until the climax was reached, when the effect is wonderfully overwhelming. The roaring of the bases and crashes of drums and tympani, with chromatic ring in the reed and cornet sections makes one think he is in the midst of a raging storm. Then a gradual diminuendo commences, the volume of tone decreases, and the oboe takes up the well-known pastor-ale melody so well-known everywhere.
The oboe solo was handled in a finished manner by Musician Hunter, who was ably seconded by Musician Lambert, who played the bird-like obligato in fine taste. At the conclusion of this movement a trumpet blare sounds
a strongly marked impetuous rhythm.
The band excelled itself here. Its clean-cut articulation of the very difficult passages which occur was marked. The attack was excellent.
Time after time Lieut. Stares led the band to a thrilling climax and the final one was so overpowering that the audience could not contain itself.

marked. The attack was excellent. Time after time Lieut. Stares led the band to a thrilling climax and the final one was so overpowering that the audience could not contain itself, and the people rose and cheered in their appreciation.

Humoresque, by Dvork, was given for an encore and a contrast to the previous heavy number was thoroughly enjoyed. The band also showed its versatility in the way they responded to Lieut. Stares' baton which again was prominent in this dainty number.

Miss Stares' first song followed, and her rendition was excellent, bringing out her sweet full soprano voice to its best advantage.

Musician Eldor Brethour played "The Red, White and Blue" as a cornet solo with variations, and showed that he was a finished performer on this instrument.

Elgar's "Salut D'Armour" was the next number, and this fine number was exquisitely rendered by the band. Lieut. Stares interpreted this favorite very cleverly and the band well deserved the round of applause which it called forth.

Les Cloches de St. Mulo was a direct contrast to the preceding selection. A dainty gavotte with bell effects by Sergt. Cumming. Musician Potter, was so well given that an encore was demanded, and it was here perhaps, that the outstanding feature of the evening was presented. "Nearer My God, to Thee" is always a popular number, but Tuesday night as played by the 80th Band, it created an indelible impression on everyone.

Echoes from the Metropolitan was a well arranged melody of grand operatic air containing many favorites of the grand opera world, and ending with a selection from the Second "Hungarian Rhapsody," which rounded off an excellent number.

Miss Stares won a decided triumph in "Shepherd, Thy Demeanour Vary," responding generously with "Annie Laurie" which she sang with feeling and skill.

The clarinet solo by Musician Tanner places him amongst the foremost performers on this difficult instrument. His brilliant execution and commanding tone captivated the audience, and he was obliged to respond to an encore.

The Overture "1911" which followed is a composition modelled along the lines of the famous 1812 Overture, and is a skilful knitting together of the national British airs into a masterful production.

The staccato work of the band was cleverly done, and their diminuendos and crescendos called for an intense concentration of mind which every man was capable of fulfilling. The majestic tone of the basses, the flute-like quality of the clarinets, the dazzling execution of the cornets and trombones, all contributed to a wonderfully balanced, effective number. Climax after climax was hurled out, and when the final movement was reached, which introduces the chimes bells and tympani, the band arose to magnificent height.

The French and Russian national anthems and Rule Britannia were a fitting close to an evening of music which has rarely been enjoyed in Belleville.

Mr. W. Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac. A.R.C.O., accompanied Miss Stares, and was an artist in every way. His work was brilliant, and he used fine judgment at all times.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND

The County Council at its next session will have a very important duty to perform when they fix the amount to be given monthly towards the Canadian Patriotic Fund. They acted wisely in voting at their last session to become associated with the National Fund and to complete their work they now have two more matters to consider, firstly, by whom the fund will be locally administered and secondly how much should be voted for the purpose. The Committee that has been handling the local fund is familiar with the details of the work and has the confidence of the public and the council would do well to request them to continue to act during the remainder of the war. The matter of the amount to be voted, over and above such sum as may be required to keep up the premiums of the insurance upon the lives of the boys is one of vital importance, in fact it may be regarded as the most important matter that has been brought before the council for many a year. It frequently becomes a municipal body to pare down their expenditures along certain lines to the narrowest possible limits but no such principle can be acted upon where such vital interests are at stake as the welfare of those dependent upon the brave boys who are fighting for the unity of the empire and the preservation of our homes. We cannot afford to be niggardly in such a matter. Our patriotism will be measured by the extent of our giving. No county in Canada has nobler traditions to maintain than the old pioneer county of Lennox and Addington. The first settlers sacrificed all their worldly possessions for that grand old flag which we are now fighting to uphold and it is to be hoped that the action of the council will begin keeping with the reputation that we wish to maintain as loyal and patriotic citizens.

The amount cannot be measured by the needs of the local committee, which is not likely to exceed $3000 per month. Our patriotism extends beyond the narrow confines of our country. Up to the 31st of December the province of Ontario had enlisted one in every thirty two of her population while Alberta and British Columbia had enlisted one for every twenty three of their population and up to the present time the regiments from the west have borne more than their proportion of the fierce battles. Everyone will concede that Ontario is in a better position to bear the financial burden than the western provinces, each of which has sent a greater proportion of its population to the front than has our province. We should gladly assume this burden even if we were sending our full proportion of soldiers for the simple provinces, each of which has sent a greater proportion of its population to the front than has our province.

We should gladly assume this burden even if we were sending our full proportion of soldiers for the simple reason that we can afford to do so.
The obligation becomes clearer when we must admit that the new provinces are sending three soldiers to our two and if we brought the comparison nearer home it would be found that we in Lennox and Addington are sending scarcely one soldier for every three that are being sent by communities of a like population in the west. There is every reason therefore why we should be liberal in our giving. We may have very good reasons for so few enlisting from our county but no reason can be assigned why we should not open our purses and deal generously with the poorer sections of our country which are giving to the cause that so vitally affects us all the best asset of all the flesh and blood of their citizens. Frontenac, exclusive of Kingston, gives $2500 per month which means an approximate additional taxation of five mills on the dollar.
While our population is only about 2000 more than Frontenac the value of our farm lands is easily double that of our neighboring county so if we keep pace with Frontenac we can easily afford to give $5000 per month. It is difficult to make comparisons with other neighboring counties as their grants are supplemented by liberal grants from the local municipalities as well as personal subscriptions which swell the grand total in many instances to two and three times the County grants. Personal contributions should not be discouraged and it may at some future date be desirable to sollicit private subscriptions but in estimating what the county should vote towards the national fund no allowance nor deduction should be made on account of what may possibly be raised by this method, as that would simply mean that the ordinary taxpayer would be taking advantage of the generosity of his more patriotic neighbor. There is however no certainty that any subscription will be called for and such a sum would be voted as will do credit to our country independent of what may possibly be raised by other means. No loophole should be left for the shirker, and the tax collector is the only one who reaches practically everyone in the county. The taxes fall evenly upon all and it is the only way of getting anything from the miserly small souled creatures who place self before country and every other consideration. The newly elected warden is the right man in the right place.
He sounded the key note in his spirited address in the town hall in January when he declared that if the farmers could not spare the men to fight they were never in a better position to spare the money to back up those who are fighting for us. It is to be hoped that he voiced the sentiments of his companions about the council board. Our honour is in their hands and we believe they will uphold it.

LINER SUNK BY

P. & O. Steamer Maloja Sunk With Many

DOVER, Feb. 29.—The P. & O. Steamer Maloja, a 12,431-ton vessel, was sunk by the Peninsular and Oriental Line, struck a mine and sank half an hour two miles off the coast. More than 40 persons were drowned or killed as a result of the accident.

The Maloja left Tilbury, England, for Bombay with passengers of all classes and a crew numbering about 200 men.

The steamer had just arrived at Dover, and was in the process of unloading. A mine exploded near the ship, and she listed immediately. She was running, and the realization that great damage had been done to the after-part of the ship led to her being abandoned. The engine-room was swamped and became unmanageable.

The plight of the vessel was desperate, and dozens of crew members were rescued. On the British tanker Empire William, of 2,133 tons, another mine and sank near the Maloja.

Eleven steamers, all built by the British, have been reported lost since the outbreak of the war.

ENEMY DRIVEN BACK

French Counter-Attacks at Verdun Are Successful.

Terrible Conflict is a Series of Hand-to-Hand Encounters at All Points on the Line—Germans Have Lost
the Redoubt Which They Had Captured West of Fort Douaumont—Attack is Broken.

PARIS, Feb. 29.—Attacks by the Germans to the north of Verdun, where the battle for the fortress is still raging fiercely, were driven back by the French fire and counter-attack, according to the official communication issued by the War Office last night.

Hand-to-hand encounters occurred to the west of Fort Douaumont, and the Germans were driven from a small redoubt which they had taken. German attacks on Fresnes, in the Woivre, the communication adds, completely failed.

Around this position the most desperate fighting of the battle has been going on since Friday. Here French counter-attacks were delivered with such crushing force that some of the German detachments were driven back, and one regiment is almost encircled.

The very unfavorable weather conditions with a heavy fall of snow may be one reason for the lessening of the force of the German attack; the despatches from the front indicate that heavy losses also may have had an effect. The slopes east and west of the village of Douaumont, which has been the centre of the heaviest fighting, are covered with German dead.

Five separate attacks have been made by the French on Fort Douaumont in an effort to retake the position, the German War Office says. Each attack was made by fresh troops, but all five were repulsed with heavy French losses. The number of unwounded French prisoners taken in the seven days of battle, the Berlin statement says, has reached 15,000. Finding the position untenable because of the fire of both artilleries, the French have evacuated the Cote du Talou, to the west of Douaumont, and the position is now unoccupied, the French say, by either side.

In the official statement received yesterday from Berlin, the German War Office announces that the Germans pressing forward to the west of Douaumont have reached Nave, on the southern border of the wooded districts north-east of Bras, taking Champneville and the Cote de Talou on the way. The taking of Champneville already had been announced by the Germans, but the announcement later was contradicted by them as based on an erroneous report. To the east of Douaumont the Germans announce the storming of extended fortified works at Haraumont.

Paris is extraordinarily calm in the presence of the great battle now in progress around Verdun. There are no indications of tension or nervousness, but only sober confidence in the result prevails.

The desire among those who know the defensive strength of the lines seems to be that the attacks should continue, for, they argue, the losses on the German side would be in proportion to the efforts.

KERMANS SHAH IS TAKEN

Russians Capture Another Fortress on Way to Bagdad.

Pursuit of the Turks is Going on With Unabated Energy, and Announcement is Made That Nearly 13,000 Prisoners Have Been Taken and 323 Guns—Capture of Kermanshah a Crowning Victory.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 29.—Official announcement was made last night that Russian troops in Persia, after dislodging the Turks from a series of positions, had occupied Kermanshah. In the Caucasus the pursuit of the Turks continues without abatement on the roads from Erzerum to Trebizond, the principle seaport, several villages having been occupied. It is again reported, unofficially, that a strong Turkish force has been defeated near Bitlis, the enemy coming from the direction of Mush.

Kermanshah is 230 miles south-west of Teheran and has a population of about 30,000. The routes from Bagdad, Shuster, Isphaham by way of Hamadan and Suleimaniyah, meet there and make the city an important centre of traffic. The enemy forces defending it consisted of Turks, Kurds, some Germans, and some Persian tribesmen. At Kermanshah the Russians are within 150 miles of Kut-el-Amara in Mesopotamia, where the British force under General Townshend is besieged.

A Reuter's despatch says that Count Kanitz, the German commander at Kermanshah, committed suicide when the Russians entered the city.

The capture of the city, whose strong natural defences were believed to make it almost impregnable, is the crowning victory of an apparently unimportant and unnoticed campaign in the mountain regions of Persia between an invading Russian army and hordes of loosely organized Kurd and mountain forces under the command of skilled German and Turkish officers, and well equipped with modern guns.

The capture of 235 officers, 12,753 men, and 323 guns in the Erzerum operations was announced in the official statement from the Russian War Office yesterday. The pursuit of the Turkish army continues, and the Russians have occupied the village of Ashtab, 50 miles west of Bagdad.

APES OF GIBRALTAR.

They Are Highly Prized and Protected by the Authorities.

The rock of Gibraltar is the home of a highly prized and carefully protected tribe of Barbary apes. The chief of this tribe is one Major, and in Gibraltar there is a saying that it "were better to kill the governor than Major."

This band of apes numbers about twenty. They came, mysteriously enough, from Africa many years ago and claimed citizenship in Europe. They are duly protected by the authorities, and any addition by birth to their number is carefully chronicled and announced in the local paper.

These apes transfer their abode from time to time, according to the state of the weather, from the highest peaks of the rock to lower and more sheltered places. They indulge their sense of humor at times by throwing stones at the soldiers. They may not be seen for weeks at a time, save in the early morning hours.

A few years ago, on account of the diminishing numbers of these creatures, some apes were procured from Barbary and turned loose upon the rock, but the resident apes killed them all. Although so fierce to intruders of their own kind, they never attack human beings and are greatly esteemed:

The Human Lobster.

The lobster has always appealed to the Englishman as affording a nickname for his fellow Englishman. "Lobster" was a favorite term of abuse among the Elizabethans, though it is only conjectural that an allusion to red faces was conveyed. As signifying a soldier, "lobster" originated in the civil war, being applied to the Roundhead cuirassiers, as Clarendon explains, "because of the bright iron shells with which they were covered." Afterward the allusion was transferred to the soldier's red uniform. But that was the "boiled lobster." The "raw lobster" was naturally the man in blue, the policeman. In earlier days we find Grose explaining that "to boil one's lobster" meant for a clergyman to become a soldier.—London Chronicle.

continue, for they argue, the losses on the German side would be in proportion to the efforts.

The whole front from the North Sea to Switzerland is on the alert, and all leave of absence has been recalled. The French maximum effort has not yet been made. The total French losses in killed, wounded, and prisoners since the Verdun battle began, it was authoritatively stated last evening, have been less than the German official communication claims in prisoners (15,000).

Ever since 5 o'clock Friday morning the flower of the German army has been hurling itself in vain against Cote du Poivre on the high plateau behind Louvemont village. They seemed even to welcome the blizzard as giving possible protection from the 75's, but the French gunners know every inch of the ground and could fire to a hairsbreadth in the blackest darkness. These snow-clad slopes are now colored red.

It is estimated that the German losses in the Verdun fighting are now well over 100,000.

A German correspondent says that the front of Fort Douaumont was entirely destroyed by the concentrated fire of 17-inch and 12-inch guns, which blew the steel and concrete cupolas to fragments. One fort nearby was blown up by a high explosive shell which penetrated the magazine.

Before the attack hundreds of German engineers had been making roads for the conveyance of the 17-inch guns. French prisoners, dazed, said, according to the German correspondent, that the terrific fire quickly made Douaumont untenable.

As the great battle at Verdun reaches its climax sympathetic activity is spreading over the entire front. The guns in Flanders are heard on the Dutch frontier. The British made local attacks in the region of Armentieres, but the fighting is mainly confined to heavy artillery.

Enemy flying machines are out in great numbers. A very large battle plane, mounting two guns, was seen leaving Zeebrugge.

Sir Sam Will Visit England.

OTAWA, Feb. 29.—The trip to England planned by Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, will probably be deferred by various events which have occurred. The Minister will now probably wait till the end of the session before going across, but will probably leave by April in any case. The Prime Minister, who is also expected to visit the Old Country again this year, will probably not go until the summer.

Office yesterday. The pursuit of the Turkish army continues, and the Russians have occupied the village of Aschkata, 50 miles west of Erzerum on the road to Trebizond. The statement follows:

"Caucasus front: The result of the Erzerum operations was attained with relatively insignificant losses considering the great success we achieved.

"We took prisoner 235 Turkish officers and 12,753 men and captured nine flags and 323 guns, besides taking in Erzerum a Turkish fortress of the first class, with large depots of arms, munitions, supplies, and signaling and telegraph and telephone apparatus."

Heavy fighting ten miles from Bitlis, in Armenia, is taking place between Russian and Turkish armies, according to a report from the Central News correspondent at Amsterdam. It is said that Russian forces from the captured city of Mush drove back the Turkish army after a hotly contested battle.

During the last few days detachments have been vigorously pursuing the Turks in a fierce snowstorm, the Russian soldiers sometimes being up to their chests in snow.

RAILWAY DAMAGED.

French Airmen Wreck Station and Tunnel at Bleyberg.

PARIS, Feb. 29.—Allied airmen have attacked and destroyed the railway station and damaged the tunnel at Bleyberg, according to the Amsterdam Echo Belge.

In the region of Verdun Adjutant Navarre in a monoplane brought down by the fire of a mitrailleuse two German aeroplanes Saturday. This brings the number of enemy planes brought down by this pilot up to five. The two machines fell within the French lines. Two of the aviators were killed and two were taken prisoners. A French air squadron, composed of nine bombarding aeroplanes, threw 144 bombs on the Metzle Sablons railway station. Another squadron bombarded the enemy establishments at Chamblay, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

Nothing New.

"I see," said Bilkins, "that a French scientist has discovered a method for staving off old age."

"Well, what of it?" demanded Wilkins. "There's nothing new in that. A man can stave off old age by jumping off the Eiffel tower, or dropping a lighted match in a powder barrel while sitting on it, or by rocking the boat when he's out in the water, or by riding over Niagara falls sitting astride of a log. Those French scientists make me tired with their hullabaloo over nothing."

"Intellectually he stood above any actor of his own or any other time." In justification of this praise these claims are made. Booth had a knowledge of seamanship acquired as a midshipman, was an expert printer, had studied law and medicine, was an acute theologian and spoke eight languages fluently, besides being "the greatest actor who ever spoke the English language."

Mercurial.

The adjective mercurial, like many others, came into ordinary speech from the realm of astrology. In astrological language a mercurial man was one born under the influence of Mercury when Mercury was in the ascendant and therefore possessed of the mental qualities supposed to distinguish the heathen.

Anthrax Father of All Germs.

The anthrax germ is the father of all germs since it was the first discovered by the weak microscopes of half a century ago. That was because the germ was so big. The microscopes could not show the smaller germs. It was the anthrax germ, therefore, that led to the development of the microbe theory which has caused such an advance in medicine.

NO POSTPONEMENT.

Piracy Will Begin at Stated Time Says German Paper.

BERLIN, Feb. 29.—No authoritative announcement is available here concerning the report that Germany will postpone the putting into effect her announced intention to sink armed merchantmen without warning. The matter is said to be still under advisement.

According to the North German Gazette, all reports that the German authorities would deviate from their plans with regard to the sinking of armed enemy merchantmen are unfounded.

"An energetic conduct of our submarine war according to the principles laid down in the memorandum will begin at the stated time," says the newspaper, which is the semi-official German Government organ.

Lights Turned Off on Scottish Coast.

LONDON, Feb. 29.—Scotland, from Aberdeenshire to the English border, was darkened last night for the first time, as a result of a stringent lighting order.

Aberdeenshire is on the eastern coast of Scotland. From there to the English border, on the North Sea coast, are the Counties of Kincardine, Forfar, Perth, Fife, Edinburgh, Haddington, and Berwick. Included in this territory are the important cities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Perth, Edinburgh, Leith, Dunbar, and Berwick.

SAVE THE VOICE.

Do Not Sing Nor Talk When Suffering From Throat Fatigue.

Fatigue injures the voice. Excessive use of the voice weakens its carrying power. From overuse or improper use of the voice a chronic pharyngitis develops. Every one knows the symptoms of overuse of the voice. The voice is husky, and its use is followed by distress. There is an increase in secretion and a constant desire to clear the throat, and there are disagreeable sensations, as fullness, tickling and the like. After a long day of shopping, sightseeing or one's daily routine of work, it is quite common to be troubled by hoarseness, which does not indicate a "cold," but is merely fatigue of parts which produce the voice.

The muscular system all over the body is tired, relaxed. The throat, being a muscular structure, shares in this fatigue, and it should never be used for any particular purpose, like singing or reciting, until the whole body is rested. If one has arranged to use the voice at the close of the day or at any other time, it should not be when suffering from fatigue.

Public speakers and singers take care of their voices and never willingly use them long enough at a time to weaken them. Singing only one song extra may hurt the voice enough to impair its clearness, and frequent overdoing may result in a permanent weakness. Rest before using the voice and taking care not to use it too long when singing or speaking saves the voice and keeps it clear and sweet and gives it carrying power.

Light and the Blind.

Light has use, even if men cannot or will not see it. Baring-Gould tells of an institution for the blind that was built in England without windows. "Why," argued the committee, "should we provide windows for those that cannot see out of them?" So scientific ventilation and heating were provided, but the walls were left unperforated by any pane of glass.

But soon the poor inmates grew pale, and a great languor fell upon them. They were restless and dissatisfied. They fell sick, and one or two died. Then it was that the committee decided to open windows in the walls. In came the healing light, and the human plants responded to it at once in revived spirits, ruddy cheeks and restored health. Light is good, the light of the world is good, even for those who shut their eyes.—Christian Herald.

Luck In Name Only.

Lutsk, or Luck, to give it the Polish name, is another of the towns of eastern Europe which can point to a checkered history. It is traditionally said to have been founded in the seventh century. Four hundred years later it had developed into the capital of an independent principality. After a further lapse of four centuries we find it a wealthy place and the seat of a bishopric. But evil times awaited it. During the Russo-Polish wars of the sixteenth century its 40,000 inhabitants were exterminated, and Lutsk lost its importance.—London Chronicle.

MOVING PICTURES.

Why They Appear to the Eye as One Continuous Photograph.

Motion pictures depend for their successful operation upon the physiological phenomenon known as "persistence of vision." If, for instance, a bright light is moved rapidly in front of the eye in a dark room it appears not as a spark, but as a line of light. A so called shooting star produces the same effect.

This result is purely physiological and is due to the fact that the retina of the eye may be considered practically as a sensitized plate of relatively slow speed, so that an image impressed upon it remains, before being effaced, for a period ranging from one-sixteenth to one-seventh of a second, according to the idiosyncrasies of the individual and the intensity of the light.

So it will be seen that if a number of pictures are successively presented to the eye they will appear as a single continuous photograph, provided the periods between them are short enough to prevent one of the photographs being effaced before its successor is presented to the eye.

If, for instance, a series of identical portraits were rapidly presented to the eye a single picture would apparently be viewed, or if we presented to the eye a series of photographs of moving objects, each one representing a minute successive phase of movement, the movements themselves would appear to be taking place. This is the principle of moving pictures.

SYRIAN SAND STORMS.

Experience of a Missionary in Wrestling With a Whirlwind.

One of the remarkable features of the climate and atmosphere of Syria is the prevalence of whirlwinds and waterspouts, both on land and over the sea. They are most prevalent in the deep trough of the Jordan valley and also in Coela-Syria, where the Lebanon and anti-Lebanon form another trough for the winds. They sometimes do an immense amount of damage and often at most unexpected seasons.

As a touring missionary in northern Syria I often met the whirlwinds. They appear in the shape of a column of dust perhaps two to five feet in diameter, rising straight in the air for several hundred feet, opening like a large funnel at the top. The lower end touches the ground and swings over the surface, picking up dust and pebbles in its path. The chaff and even grain on the thrashing floors are sucked up and disappear. Small fish are sometimes drawn up when the swaying column passes over a stream or lake.

Many years ago I made the experiment of riding through the swaying column of a rather innocent looking whirlwind. My horse was terrified, and I had difficulty in keeping my seat in the saddle. It is impossible to say exactly what did happen. It took me some time to find my hat and several days to get the sand and dust from my eyes and ears and clothing, and I

COLOSSAL GRAVEYARDS.

Imposing Mountains That Are Built of Animal Skeletons.

Many of the most imposing mountain ranges of the globe are largely made up of limestones composed almost entirely of the hard parts of animals which once lived in the sea, the most important of these rock building forms being of a very small size. The solid earth is, in fact, a colossal graveyard, and many of its most imposing elevations are stupendous tombstones.

The chalk making up the white cliffs to which England owes her name of Albion (Latin, albus, white) is chiefly composed of microscopic shells closely resembling those now found at the bottom of the sea. Hills and mountain ranges largely made of this chalk extend from Britain and France round the shores of the Mediterranean and away into Asia and are largely represented in other parts of the world. Even more remarkable is the limestone of which the pyramids are built.

This is chiefly made up of coin shaped shells (mammulites), partly responsible, no doubt, for eastern legends of magic money. The limestone containing them attains a thickness of several thousand feet and is the material of which many mountain ranges are largely built. Beginning on the west, we have the Pyrenees and Alps, followed by the Carpathians, Caucasus, mountains of Asia Minor, north Africa and Baluchistan and, lastly, the Suleiman mountains, Himalayas and ranges in China and Japan.

This Country of Bigness.

America is a quarter section, not a square foot country. It is the land of the biggest lakes, the longest rivers, the fastest trains, the tallest buildings, the land of the huge corporation and the spacious farm and the prodigious industrial enterprise. The inhabitant of this country of bigness feels the urge of these immeasurable interests; therefore his fascination for large figures and enormous scales of measurement. He feels that he must keep up to the pace of business or get out of the game or be run over. One advance step necessitates a longer stride to follow. He must always have his "next." * * * Big and swift business always fascinates the American mind.—From "American Ideals," by Clayton Sedgwick Cooper.

Habits of the Wildcat.

To say that a dog can "whip his weight in wildcats" is to pay about the highest tribute to his strength, courage and activity, and there are very few dogs that would care to earn such a tribute if they understood all it implied. Not that a wildcat is of a specially aggressive disposition. On the contrary, he would sooner mind his own business any time than fight. So anxious is he as a rule to keep out of trouble that he has often been accused of cowardice, but he has on so many occasions given evidence of the most desperate courage that it is doubtful if the accusation is a fair one. When wounded or at bay he is perhaps as dangerous as any creature of his size.

WET GUNCOTT.

More Stable Than Dry as Only From a Severe

Owing to its high percentage of oxygen, guncotton when in a dry state rapidly ignites from the air and is dangerous, exploding spontaneously from slight shock. Dry guncotton is an unconfined mass merely a flash like gunpowder, only igniting rapidly; it does not exert effect unless confined, as in its dry state guncotton is used for primers and detonators unstable and will explode from shock or blow.

The guncotton carried on vessels and submarines is a plosive charge of torpedoes wet guncotton, kept in a liquid state to prevent evaporation. Wet guncotton can only be set off by a severe shock; but detonators of some modern explosives are necessary, firing on impact of the torpedo ship's side and in turn the guncotton in the war head. Guncotton is the usual charge for torpedoes.

Ordinarily safe if kept away from heat and kept dry, cotton becomes dangerous if it spontaneously explodes. Slight excess of acid is a constant and regular test. It is part of the duties of officers of war vessels and depots. Guncotton giving a test is promptly condemned, destroyed or reworked and

History of Cotton.

Prior to the middle of the nineteenth century cotton, so far as is concerned, was practically unknown. It was grown only in the West Indies. When eight bags of cotton arrived in Liverpool in 1801, some house officers seized the cotton and so much cotton was raised in America. The first cotton mill was set up in Beverly, Mass. In 1793, when the cotton gin was invented, cotton raising profitable, and cotton became the leading crop of

Went Back on His Authority.

Leslie Stephen's single meeting with Freeman, the historian, was in the nature of a collision. "I came in contact with him only once," he said. "He wrote a life of Alfred for the Dictionary of National Biography under my editorship, but declined to do more because we had a difference of opinion as to whether Athelstane should be spelled with an 'A.' That was, I confess, a question to which I was culpably indifferent, but I had taken competent advice, and my system (I forget what it was) had been elsewhere sanctioned by the great historian Stubbs. Now, as Freeman was never tired of asserting the infallibility of Stubbs, I innocently thought that I might take refuge behind so eminent an authority. The result was that for once Freeman blasphemed Stubbs and refused to co-operate any longer in an unscholarlike enterprise."

Honest Praise.

An honest compliment was that paid to M. de Vendome, who, while commanding the French army in Italy, dispatched a young nobleman to announce to his master the victory which he had gained at Suzzara. The latter while attempting to describe the battle became several times much confused in his narrative, when, although the king preserved his gravity, the Duchess of Burgundy, who was present, laughed so heartily that at last the young gentleman said, "Sire, it is easier for M. de Vendome to win a battle than for me to describe it."

Treat Ulcers With Sugar.

Sugar as a dressing for ulcers is advocated by Dr. P. M. O'Brien of Bradford, England, in a letter to the London Lancet. He says he has used it in medium sized crystals for many years, having learned of it from an old woman who was treating an ulcer on her own leg in this manner, and has found it most effective. The New York Medical Journal says that Dr. Magnus of Marburg, Germany, also uses sugar and has found it invaluable as a dressing in all save tuberculous lesions.

The pigeon rose to a great height, always keeping above the hawk to prevent it from striking. When the pigeon got directly over an old horsepower ginhouse it suddenly darted by the hawk and came groundward like a shot, in a line a few feet from the side of this ginhouse. The hawk pursued, and like two streaks they came down. Eight feet from the ground the pigeon swerved aside under the ginhouse. The hawk dashed headlong to its death on the ground.

Good and Bad Points.

A man entered a famous restaurant and asked for coffee. After he had finished his repast he called the waiter and said: "Waiter, this coffee has its good points and its bad points. One of its good points is this—it has no chicory in it." "Yes, sir," replied the waiter, quite gratified. Visions of a handsome tip floated before his mind's eye, and he rubbed his hands gleefully. "But," resumed the customer, "its bad point is this—it has no coffee in it."—Argonaut.

"Hang on Tight."

When a smoking car with thirty-five passengers jumped the track a railroad engineer in the car, off duty, yelled to the passengers to "hang on tight," and while the car turned over no one was hurt.

"Hang on tight" is good advice in most upsets. The man who hangs on tight to himself when his temper is upset will get through without hurting either himself or others. The man who "hangs on tight" to his earnings ends with a competence. The man who "hangs on tight" to his place when business upsets come generally holds down his job. The man who "hangs on tight" when discouragement or even disaster upsets others is a man to be hopeful about, because he will keep right side up whatever else turns over.

STING OF THE AGY.

A Madagascar Plant That Can Drive Men Mad With Pain.

Among the many peculiar and dis- concerting plants and creatures that abound in Madagascar, probably none is more surprising and disconcerting than the agy tree, so called, which is not a tree, but a climbing plant. The following incident, quoted by Mr. James Sibree, F. R. G. S., in "A Naturalist in Madagascar," illustrates the painful result of contact with the agy. The story is told by a Mr. Montgomery: Walking under some trees and push- ing aside the reeds and grass, I was startled by a sudden tingling and prickling sensation over the backs of my hands and fingers. I stopped in sudden surprise, for the pain was se- vere, and I had touched nothing ex- cept the grass. But in another minute the pain increased, the tingling, burn- ing sensation seemed to be extending rapidly up my wrists, and I could see nothing to cause it. As I lowered my head to look scalding pain shot into my ears and neck and grew worse every instant. Dazed and bewildered, I stood a few seconds in helplessness, for I could neither see nor guess at the cause of the terrible distress. Then I got back to my company with agony writ- ten plain enough on every line of my face.

The men started up when they saw me, crying, "You have been stung by the agy!" Some of them led me to a seat; others rushed for water from the river, and two or three brought sand heaped up in their hands. Then they chafed me with the sand and water to take out the stinging hairs, which they knew caused the mischief. As they rubbed me I felt the pain abate, and after they had chafed me for about a quarter of an hour I was comparatively free from pain. While the men were rubbing me I was able to discern to some extent the cause of my distress. Countless hairs, like tiny ar- rows, almost transparent, pointed at either end and from a third to a fourth of an inch long had dropped on me in an invisible shower from the agy tree as I stood under it. Before I came away that afternoon, very cautiously I ventured to examine the tree at a little distance and found that the tiny hairs grew outside a thickish pod or shell not quite so large as a small banana. The pods were fully ripe (unluckily for me) just at that time, and the light wind was scattering their coverings.

Battle of the Herrings.

The battle of the herrings was the comical name given to a fight between an English force and a French detach- ment not far from Orleans in 1429. The English were conveying a large quantity of supplies, mainly herrings, for it was Lent, to the army that was besieging Orleans. The English had 1,000 men, the French 6,000. The former repulsed the assailants and saved the herrings, so the battle was named in honor of the supplies.—London Tel- egraph.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.
WINNIPEG, Feb. 28.—With a fluctua- tion of 5 1/2c between high and low, Win- niipeg May wheat closed at $1.07 today, a drop of 5 1/2c for the day, or 28 1/2c be- low the high point of the season. July closed 5 1/2c lower and 3/4c over Chicago July.

Around noon the market stiffened slightly, selling back to $1.10 1/2, but by 12.30 it had broken very sharply, due to continuous squeezing, and at one time flashed to $1.07 1/2, but no trade was re- corded. Then it went to $1.08 1/2, then a final break carried May to $1.06 1/2, then back to $1.07.

Trade in oats was better and there was considerable trade in export. Cash trade was light. Prices were fractionally better on low grades.

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta- ble Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straight- ened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it"—Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritabil- ity, backache, headaches, dragging sen- sations, all point to female derange- ments which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testi- mony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A FURRED TONGUE.

It May Mean Wrecked Nerves and Not a Disordered Stomach.

"I suppose that there is no more in- eradicable idea in the mind of the doctor than that the furred tongue is essentially an indication of a deranged stomach," writes Sir James Goodhart, consulting physician to Guy's hospital, London, in the London Lancet. Yet, according to Sir James, it is by no means always so. And he goes on to prove it by cases in his own extensive practice.

One of these was of a man in a very responsible position, a leader of men, to whom he had to give orders that had to be obeyed and from whom he had to hear much grumbling; a very hard worker and "the fastest talker I have ever struck," full of energy and playing every ounce of it. He was in splendid health, but suffered from a furred tongue and a bad taste in the mouth. In his case these were not due to the stomach at all, but to a dis- ordered state of nerve control.

"Nervous fears and nervous tastes are common enough, and they deserve a special thought," says Sir James. He believes that man is kept sweet and wholesome largely by nervous control, and when he loses this control "the parts become fevered, the mu- cous membrane dry, the nerves irri- tated, and taste is perverted." The men so affected are those who are

"young woman graciously. 'don't you know,' said Mr. lost her three months ago." aid the shocked young wouldn't know? I beg your pardon, for my inquiry." said the disconsolate widow: "it's as bad as it might have got good help."—Exchange.

Visiting Cards.

It would be difficult to say if visiting cards were first or quite certain of the fact are not of very ancient date. They were adopted in England before they were generally in use on the continent. It was probably in 1700 that they came into Great Britain, and it was as late as 1750 when they were introduced into Paris. It appears that the use of cards were regular playthings in the hands of which were the backs of which were the address.

Hypatia.

The great scientists of the ancient school, or, rather, mathematicians were Pappus, one of the greatest of ancient mathematicians; his unfortunate daughter, Hypatia—who appears to be a better mathematician than the story of whose life and death is familiar through Kingsley. Unfortunately none of them is extant. She was the last of the Alexandrian philosophers who were famous. She lived about

The islands were once given by England as security for a loan and never redeemed. In the voters must go to the islands, and in some cases the distance traveled is eight miles.

Tried to Fly. John Milton in "Britain to the Conquest" says that in youth King Harold, last of the Saxons, strangely aspiring, had made and fitted wings to his hands and feet. With these, on the top of a tower, spread out to gather the air, he flew more than a furlong; but, the wind being too high, he came fluttering to the ground, maiming all his limbs, yet so conceited was he of his art that the cause of his fall was attributed to the want of a tail, as birds have, which he forgot to make.

The English Pheasant.

It is claimed that the pheasant of the English preserves can trace its pedigree directly to the brilliant bird of the same species in Japan. About the middle of the nineteenth century a few live pheasants were brought from Japan and crossed with the common species. The result of this was, it is said, that a new race of birds was introduced, and the beautiful pheasant, with its iridescent plumage, was produced and naturalized as an English bird.

One Way to Cut Brass.

To cut sheet brass chemically the following method meets with great success: Make a strong solution of bichloride of mercury in alcohol. With a quill pen draw a line across the brass where it is to be cut. Let it dry on and with the same pen draw over this line with nitric acid. The brass may then be broken across like glass that has been cut with a diamond.—Exchange.

Recommendation Not Necessary.

"So you're going to leave us, Mary?" "Yes, mum. I've got to." "And do you want me to give you a letter of recommendation?" "It ain't necessary, mum. The man I'm going to work for is willing to take chances. I'm leavin' to get married."—Detroit Free Press.

Books as Carriers of Disease.

The report of the commissioner of education undertakes to reassure persons who are fearful of the spread of disease through books by recording the results of recent investigation at Yale university. During the cleaning of the library a chemical analysis of the dust was made. About half of this was found to be mineral matter, while the other half was organic, including paper fiber, wood fiber and molds. No mouth bacteria were found, and in general the analysis showed the harmlessness of the dust.

General Dissatisfaction.

Tiny Elsbeth was taken by mother to an afternoon tea, fashionable, but where the various ladies present were well acquainted and indulged too freely in gossip. The little girl sat very straight and still, listening to all that was said. Critical remarks were made about absent friends, and even guests who took their departure were discussed with some freedom.

Elsbeth edged closer to her mother and remarked in a solemn whisper:

"Nobody seems jes' exactly satisfied with anybody, does they, mamma?"

Who Got the Baby?

Once upon a time a crocodile stole a baby and was about to make a dinner of it. The frantic mother begged so piteously for the child that the crocodile said:

"Tell me one truth and you shall have your baby again."

The mother replied, "You will not give him back to me."

"Then," said the crocodile, "by our agreement I shall keep him, for if you have told the truth I am not going to give him back, and if it is a lie I have also won."

But the mother said, "If I told you the truth you are bound by your promise, and if it is not the truth it will not be a lie until you have given me my child."

NATURE IN A BLAZE.

Gorgeous Spectacle of the Midnight Sun at Karungi.

I was glad I stopped at Karungi, Sweden, for I saw the midnight sun—the almost midnight sun, to be exact, for although it was noonday bright all night the sun did make a bluff at setting. It went down at twenty minutes to 12 and rose twenty minutes after 12.

The sun went down blood red, and the sky was crimsoned almost to the zenith. It seemed as if all the north were on fire. The river burned in the glow, and the sky took on tints that ranged from cardinal to pink. Just as the whole place seemed about to burst into flame, the sun dropped out of sight, and the glaring reds began to mellow into softer shades, the river lost its glow of fire, and the sky dulled and dimmed until it looked like a great inverted dome that had been white hot and was cooling slowly.

There were no other shades than the shades of fire—none of the usual maroons and cerises and garnets that come as the aftermath of mountain sunsets. Everything was carmine. The air quivered redly, and the trees and the grass were rufescent. All this softened gradually into a glowing one toned mass of color. Then, at twenty minutes past 12, at a point that seemed not more than half a mile along the horizon from the place where the sun disappeared, there came a golden glory that spread evenly over the reddened sky. The sun was rising and soon was above the horizon. It went down as red as fire. It came up bright, glittering, gleaming, as if during the forty minutes it had been below the horizon some titanic hand had polished it for another day's use.

I asked in Stockholm and Christiania:

"When do you sleep?" "In the winter," they said. "Then the nights are so long there is nothing else to do."

MUSICAL EVENT

APPROACHING VISIT OF THE BAND OF THE 80TH BATTALION, C.E.F.

We have pleasure in announcing the approaching visit of the Regimental Band of the 80th Battalion, C.E.F., under the leadership of Lieut. H. A. Stares, Musical Bac., Trinity University, Toronto. Bandmaster Stares has had long experience in handling Military Bands and has won a foremost place among the Bandmasters of the Continent, having conducted several successful tours from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Band numbers about fifty artists, each one of whom is capable of taking solo parts and in combination forms one of the finest musical organizations that has ever appealed to the public.

The Band is also fortunate in possessing all the equipment necessary to properly interpret the classical numbers which will be presented.

With such a combination of Artists it is needless to say that a rare musical treat may be anticipated. The programme will consist of Military Marches, Fantasies, Selections from Classical Composers, Instrumental Solos, Overtures, etc. As an additional attraction the band will have the able assistance of Miss Victoria Stares, who possesses a rich Soprano voice and is a soloist of more than local reputation in Western Ontario.

The visit of this band should particularly arouse the interest of the Public as it is attached to a Battalion which will in all probability leave Canada for the Front in the near future and it should not be forgotten that the members composing this notable organization are all Volunteers for Active Service on the Battle Field.

No music lover or Patriotic Citizen should fail to patronize this concert.

WOULD SINK ALL SHIPS IF BOUND FOR ENGLAND

BERLIN via Londob, Feb. 28.—George Bernhard, in a leading article in the Vossische Zeitung, calls for the destruction of all ships bound for England, whether armed or not. He points to the seizure by Portugal of German ships, which, he says, will probably be used under the Portuguese flag to carry foodstuffs to England.

The writer fears also that many German ships now lying in the South American harbors may eventually be employed for the same purpose, and asks: "Shall we then let these ships quietly pass, which as unarmed English merchantmen cross the ocean? We shall have to do so if we hold to the phantom of torpedoing only armed merchantmen and of sparing neutral ships in all circumstances."

WOULD SCARE NEUTRALS

Herr Bernhard thinks that war should be carried out not against certain categories of British ships, but against British commerce on the seas, and declares that the new submarine campaign is the only permissible measure of reprisal against England's breach of international law.

The Red Cross Society

The Society is indebted to Miss Annie Cooper's pupils of Hayburn Public School, for a donation of $12 to be applied on the second Motor Ambulance Fund.

The following letter was received from Headquarters:

Toronto, Feb. 25th, 1916.

Mrs. F. E. Miller,
Vice-Pres. Red Cross,
Napanee, Ont.

Dear Mrs. Miller:—

Referring again to your visit some days ago, I am glad to inform you, that the Society will gratefully receive another Ambulance, if you can succeed in raising the funds to purchase it. The ambulances, that we have sent over are doing grand work and are much appreciated.

Faithfully yours,

(Sgt.) Noel Marshall,

Chairman, Executive Committee.

Another branch of Red Cross work has been undertaken by our Society, under the heading of "Prisoners-of-war Department," with Mrs. F. S. Wartman as Superintendent. We might say that it is not necessary for one person to pay $2.50 a month, which is the amount required for the care of a prisoner, but two or more persons may join together paying either a half or a third of the amount thus making the responsibility lighter for each one. Our subscriptions are sent through Head Office in Toronto to the Department of their Office in London, England. Mrs. Rivers-Bulkeley is the head of the Department there and she arranges, not only for the despatch of the parcel but sends to the giver, the name and address of the prisoner to whom the parcel is sent. This branch of our work gives the feeling to the prisoners that some one cares for their welfare, while it also creates a bond of personal feeling, which is one of the highest functions of all Red Cross work.

The Secretary is in communication with Mrs. Rivers-Bulkeley and soon expects to have the names of several prisoners whom we can adopt. Some names were handed in on Saturday, of those who wish to help with this branch of the work and all others, who wish to do so, will kindly give the names to Mrs. Wartman.

The Woolen Committee is busy preparing for a Progressive Euchre to be held in the Oddfellows' Hall, over the Merchants' Bank, on Friday evening, March 3rd instead of March 2nd, as previously advertised.

The Finance Committee will meet at Soldiers' Club at three thirty o'clock, on Tuesday, March 7th, when the returns from the Mite Boxes will be handed in.

The rooms will be open all day Saturday—on the afternoon tea will be served.

against British commerce on the seas, and declares that the new submarine campaign is the only permissible measure of reprisal against England's breach of international law."

If this does not accomplish the object which is to prevent the provisioning of England, he adds, "a deathblow can be dealt England only if we direct a request to all neutral states to be kind enough to keep out of English coastal waters for a specified time, since, otherwise we cannot assume responsibility for their ship losses."

You can have success with grapefruit seeds by taking a few precautions. When planting these seeds do not keep any that have been cut. Then before planting the seeds should be soaked for one day or at least for half a day.

Fill the receptacle up to within three-quarters of an inch of the top with dirt mixed with a little sand, on which place the seeds so thickly that no soil can be seen.

Then cover with dirt and keep in a warm, sunny place, wetting with warm water, but not too wet.

The seeds sprout in about five weeks. They are both beautiful and hardy and need practically no attention.

McGregor of Ford

RECENTLY ONE OF OUR FRIENDS FROM ACROSS the line was standing on the sidewalk in one of our larger Canadian cities viewing a march past of some of our soldier boys. The Kilties were going by.

"How typically Canadian are the kilties," he remarked. "We,
on our side of the big pond associate the Highland uniform as much with Canada as with Scotland. Why is it?"

The reply was to the effect that it was because the Scotch had contributed so largely to the settlement and upbuilding of the Dominion and so many Canadians of Scottish ancestry had made themselves worthy of high ranks in the history of Canada.

Among these Canadians of Scotch parentage, who have won a place among Canada's great builders of industry we must reckon Gordon M. McGregor, of Ford, Ont.

About the year 1850, Mr. McGregor's grandparents set out from Glasgow, Scotland, to settle in what was then a new and far away country—Canada.

A few years later we find them located at Sarnia, Ontario, where a son, William, was born.

When still a young man, William McGregor took a very active interest in the business and political life of the country and was elected a member of the Dominion-Parliament, serving his country and his district well and faithfully for twenty years.

Gordon McGregor, about whom this is written, was the son of William McGregor, and was born at Windsor, Ont. As Gordon Mc-Gregor grew to manhood, he capably assumed much of the business cares of his father.

William McGregor eventually became interested in the Walkerville Wagon Co., at Walkerville, Ontario, and, shortly after, his son, Gordon McGregor, was made manager of the firm. Here the son began to show that business foresight that has made him one of the prominent figures in the business world of Canada.

About this time an event took place in the carriage and wagon industry that caused the greatest concern. This was the advent and the establishment of the automobile as a practical vehicle.

Some dealers and builders were so alarmed that they thought their business would go to immediate rack and ruin and that the auto would supersede horse-drawn vehicles entirely. Others were cool-headed enough to see the advantages that this new industry afforded and governed themselves accordingly.

Among the latter was Gordon McGregor, who believed that he could successfully enter upon the business of manufacturing automobiles and looked about him for wise methods of doing this.

He got in touch with many manufacturers and looked over many makes of cars. Finally, he decided on one make and effected arrangements for its production in this country. The car he chose was the Ford.

and looked about him for wise methods of doing this. He got in touch with many manufacturers and looked over many makes of cars. Finally, he decided on one make and effected arrangements for its production in this country. The car he chose was the Ford.

He then tried to induce some of his friends in Canada to invest in the project and encountered all the usual cold, disheartening difficulties attendant upon the organization of a new and untried proposition. If they could have but looked ten or eleven years ahead he would have had no worries over the organization of a company even double or quadruple the size.

No stock was offered for sale outside the Dominion, until all Canadians had been given an opportunity to subscribe.

Finally, in August, 1904, they organized the company with a capital of $125,000.

Then came the difficulties of manufacture and for three years it was a constant struggle to win success.

But success came and greater success than the founders ever dreamed of—a success abounding in truly marvelous facts and figures.

And this is the story of Gordon McGregor of Ford, Ontario, and of the establishment of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited.

To-day half the population of four town depend upon the Ford Company of Canada for their earnings. These are Ford City, Walkerville, Windsor and Sandwich.

The last census states that the average family consists of five persons. As there are over 3,000 employees in the towns mentioned above whose work is devoted to the manufacture of Ford cars, this official census figure shows that there are over 15,000 people that look to the Ford Company for their support. This does not include the nine cities in Canada in which Ford Branches are established, which would add over 5,600 more.

And Ford employees are paid three times as well as the average as shown by government wage reports.

In April, 1915, a time when most Canadian manufacturers were following a policy of retrenchment, the present Ford schedule of wages was adopted by which the company virtually handed to its employees $50,000 a month increased wages and reduced the working hours from nine to eight per day.

Surely, this is a great boon to Canadian workmen and their families. It is a boon to Canadian merchants who benefit by the increased purchasing power of all these families. It is a boon to the entire country in time of war when living expenses are higher than ever before.

And these employees have responded in like measure to the Empire's need for her people's support, Ford City alone having made what is probably a record contribution to the Patriotic Fund of $34 per capita.

More than 300 Ford employees have enlisted for overseas service, and the Company is spending thousands of dollars in moving pictures which are offered free to assist in recruiting work all over the Dominion.

What an immense expression of confidence in the ultimate and unquestionable success of British Arms and the allied cause was this great wage increase!

But it was not the only evidence of the Ford Company's faith in the Empire.

Before the outbreak of hostilities the Company decided to reduce the price of the car by $60. When the war came upon us the company might well have been pardoned for withholding this reduction for a time. But they never even considered it. The reduction was made the same day war was declared.

And you can realize how real this confidence in the victorious prosperity of Canada was when you consider that the price of Ford cars are set in accordance with the estimated production for the coming fiscal year and not by any means are they based on the profits of the preceding year. $652,000 has been spent on new buildings in Ford City since the war began.

Over $1,000,000 has been spent on new buildings in four Canadian cities since war began, making a total expenditure for new buildings of approximately a million and three quarters.

$1,000,000 has been spent in new equipment since war began. 900 men have been added to the pay roll since war began.

And if there is needed further proof of this company's absolute conviction in the progress and prosperity of the Dominion, it may be found in the fact that another $60 reduction in the price of the car was made last August—making a total reduction of $120.00 since war began.

This new price requires an output of 40,000 cars this year.

Then, too, the price of Ford parts has been reduced by $147 per car—a reduction that means a big increased economy to Ford owners.

Such immense expenditures and price reductions as these are of the greatest benefit to the general welfare of the nation under existing conditions. They form one of the greatest possible influences towards boosting the prosperity of Canada.

Remember that all but $16.88 worth of the material that goes into the construction of a Ford car is bought here in Canada—and it would all be bought here if it were possible to get it.

Truly, the Ford is, after all, a Canadian Car, built by Canadians. Very few Canadian manufacturers are able to show such a support to Canadian industry as this.

The Canadian Ford Company is basing this year's factory production plans on just double the business done last year.

They stake everything on the conviction that Canada is BOUND to prosper. They place all on the belief that Britain and her allies are BOUND to win.

McGregor of Ford and his Canadian associates may be pardoned for feeling proud of this record.

Another criticism is that unless the Government's new born desire for thrift leads them to use the local assessment rolls as the basis of their business tax it will mean the creation of an expensive army of office holders for the collection and assessment of the new taxes. Still this is a minor consideration. The great question is, Will the new taxes do the work properly and efficiently? Does the Finance Minister's budget get at each rich man, corporation or partnership in the exact and just proportions in which he should be got at.

The first answer is that the profiteers, the men who made money out of the Empire's danger, particularly the shell-makers, get off lightly, while the legitimate businesses of long standing are hard hit. It stands to reason that a war profiteer can more easily afford to pay twenty five per cent of his enormously swollen gains above seven per cent, or ten per cent, as the case may be. In other words no distinction is made between the sheep and the goats. The man who is satisfied with fair profits on a routinary business is put on exactly the same footing as the get-rich-quick shark who has leached the Empire's life-blood and tried to distract attention from his hoggishness by contributions to the Patriotic Fund. The Finance Minister should have it in his heart to make the rewards for moderation greater than the rewards for ruthless greed. Besides—and here is a disturbing thought—how is the Government going to get at the beneficiaries of the Old Shell Committee and the new Imperial Munitions Board since all along it has taken the ground that it had no specific knowledge of their operations, their business being a confidential one with the British Government whose money it was they were absorbing. If they don't know these people how are they going to tax them? The very fact of their "coughing up" will dispose of the Government's hollow sophistry that it knows nothing about them and washes its hands of them. Thus is Sir Wilfrid provided with a new argument for an inquiry into the Shell Committee which the Government so far has refused.

The new taxes place a premium on watered stock. Some of the biggest corporations in the country are the most heavily watered—so heavily given their new owners and that midnight Tuesday, they will be authorized to sink without warning all armed merchant ships of the enemies of Germany. It was said also that many of the submarine commanders probably had left their bases on voyages and that even should the United States request the postponing of the opening of the campaign, it would be impossible to get word to many of the submarines.

While Count Von Bernstorff and other officials of the German Embassy declined to discuss the instructions from Berlin in any way, it is believed the ambassador will present them orally to Secretary Lansing tomorrow.

The will not, it was said, take the form of a note unless Secretary Lansing desires it. Count Von Bernstorff received his instructions in reply to a request from the United States for assurances regarding the conduct of submarine warfare in the future, occasioned by the memorandum announcing the intention of Germany to sink armed ships without warning, which the administration considered to be inconsistent with the assurances previously given.

watered that the water drowns out what would be a considerable dividend over seven per cent. on a legitimate capitalization. Thus it happens that of all the railways in Canada perhaps only the C.N.R. will contribute—it's share is said to be two million dollars a year—to this new source of revenue. Although the C.N.R. has made a practice for some years of burying its treasure in subsidiary companies, melons and increased capitalization it is still fat and prosperous and in a position to "come through."

Not so the G.T.P. and the C.N.R. They have no prongs to spare. Sir William Macenzie sat all through Finance Minister White's speech with a brooding air. Perhaps he was brooding over the lovely jest of Baron Shaughnessy who the other day utilized four thousand miles of new copper wire to inquire by long distance telephone of Vancouver whether the C.N.R. train stalled in the snow two weeks ago had arrived yet. An Irish trick of Baron Shaughnessy's but when these Olympians joke they joke. Or perhaps he was brooding over his chance to grab off another forty millions or so. At all events when Sir Thomas mentioned railways and spoke of their paying, a cynical smile overspread his countenance. The C.N.R. is not in the habit of giving money to the Government—its practice is rather to take. The chances are not so bright this session for a subsidy or a credit guarantee and Sir William does not haunt the House of Commons as much as usual, but he is not without hope.

The opinion is generally expressed that the ultimate consumer will, as usual, do the paying. The corporations will find a way of passing the tax along. For example the transportation companies can recoup themselves by a horizontal increase in fares and freights. The banks have it in their power to increase their rates for loans, or decrease their interest rate on deposits. The life insurance companies can charge more for life insurance and so on. There will, as Finance Minister White says, be readjustments, which freely translated, means that the big fellows will "pass the buck."

P.S.—Walter is here some have not seen or heard from

Another Interesting Letter From Egypt

Cairo, January 25th, 1916.

Dear Father and Mother:

Our mail is very irregular now, we never know when to expect any or whether to expect any at all. I got a paper but no letter from you on last mail. I have not had anything very interesting to write lately, but yesterday we had a very enjoyable afternoon. Six of us Sergeants were invited by a Mr. Smith to pay a visit to the Egyptian museum with him.

In the first place I will tell something of Mr. Smith, he is an Englishman, who is at present a teacher in the Normal School here, where the natives are training for teachers. He has spent twenty-seven years teaching here and has studied the history of Egypt extensively, in fact has written several books on Egyptology. He has a wife in England and five children, three in England and two in the army.

Each year he gets three months' holiday, and always spends them with his family in England. I do not know how he became acquainted with anyone in the corps, but he has taken some of the officers and yesterday invited some of the sergeants to go through the museum with him.

It would not be very interesting to tell just what we saw, but as we went along he told us all about the ancient religion, and how each piece was connected with history.

First, there was some work done before the use of iron was known, boats made without a bit of metal in them, things carved out of stone and some of instruments used to work on them, stone chisels, mallets, etc. He showed us tablets with the earliest known writing, pictures of birds, etc., it is thought that the letters used in writing were original. ly pictures of things.

He then told us some of their religious views in regard to the dead.

They believed that the dead were resurrected, in fact could come back to life whenever they wished. In each tomb where the mummy was placed, therefore, there was placed food which the person could eat on rising, also pieces of stone carved in the shape of articles of food. Also on the wall were carvings of ducks, cows, etc., for the risen person had the power to change all these to the real thing. Large jars of beer were placed beside the body, also all weapons, jewellery, etc.

Near the mummy case some earth was put on the floor, something the shape of a man, seeds were planted in this and well moistened, when the burial took place, so that the grain grew up, and, of course, all dried up. This is called the "Resurrection Bed."

When the mummy was wrapped up a scarab was put on his chest over the heart. The entrails were all taken out and kept in a jar so that the person would be all there when he resurrected himself. The scarab is a large beetle which is found in the soft earth here. At a certain time of the year it rolls a ball of mud, and after rolling the ball ahead of it until it reaches some quiet place, it lays its eggs inside the mud which bursts open earth. At a certain time of the year it rolls a ball of mud, and after rolling the ball ahead of it until it reaches some quiet place, it lays its eggs inside the mud which bursts open when the eggs hatch. The scarab was therefore taken as the symbol of eternal life, and that is the reason why a stone, carved like one, was always buried with the mummy.

Lured with it also were numerous small figures of men and women, some carrying hoes, some plows, some water bottles, etc. These each have an inscription carved on them, such as "I plow (he land," or "I hoe the land."
These little figures are called "answers," as they were supposed to come to life when the mummy did and be ready at once to "answer" to any of the person's wants. These things were all in one room of the museum, from the mummy itself to the REAL food which had been buried with it thousands of years ago.

In another room were glass cases containing family scenes, all carved out in wood. No one knows how old.
Women grinding corn, washing clothes,
the water wheel, eating, baking bread, etc. This was very interesting, especially when you realize there is no change whatever between the way the natives do things now, and then. You can see the same things being done in the same way out in the country.

In this room was the mummy of a certain King, and near it the statues of his eighty warriors, all wooden;
forty bowman, each carrying a quiver and ivory pointed arrows, and forty spearmen, with leather shields and copper pointed spears. No two of the figures are alike in height or looks,
and are supposed to be real portraits of the warriors.

We next visited the jewellery room where there are collections of things worn as jewellery from the earliest times. It is priceless, of course.

Before they used metal there were ornaments made of polished stone.
Some of the cutest things imaginable, tiny animals, birds, etc., perfectly done, and about a quarter of an inch each way. Later they had ornaments of silver and gold, very beautiful and delicate work. There were crown jewels in several cases, found with the bodies of princesses in their tombs.

In another room were children's things. A case containing toys, rattles, dolls, chess, games, tops and things such as children use. Yet there were also tablets of stone showing attempts at drawing, crude animals, etc, some of them with the guide lines still showing.

There were also two cases of ladies toilet articles, mirrors, combs, paint and powder trays with small sticks with which the women blacked their eyelids. Women here do that yet, and the veiled women always have very pretty eyes on this account. Since all one can see of the face is the eyes it makes them all look passable at least.
The rooms are arranged historically, as far as possible, and it is very noticeable that the more modern the things are the worse they are made, more carelessly done, and not nearly such fine work attempted. About the time of the Roman invasion, a few hundred years B.C., the work was very poor, even I could see that, and I do not pretend to know anything about sculpture.

We got through about 5 p.m. Then Mr. Smith took us all out to his flat where we had tea, after which he took up to the house of a friend of his, an Englishman, who is employed by the government to teach weaving in the schools, Persian rugs, carpets, etc.

This is almost a lost industry here and an attempt is being made to resurrect it.

He is also quite a fine painter, and has his flat decorated with his own work. He is a collector of antique stuff, too, and knows a fake when he sees it. He has a fine collection.

When we got back to Mr. Smith's place a fine supper was ready for us, after which we came home, getting in a little after ten o'clock.

Mr. Smith told us more about Egypt than any of us ever heard, and which we would never find in books.

An Englishman is never put at the head of anything in the government.
All the heads of departments are Egyptians, but all the deputies and second in command are Englishmen.

For instance, the principal of the Normal school is a native, an old pupil of Mr. Smith's, but nothing is ever done without advice from Mr.
Smith. There seems to be an exception to this in the Egyptian army, where no native is allowed to reach a rank higher than a Major. All the Lt.-Col's, Colonels and Generals are Englishmen, though they speak Arabic.

Land in Egypt is extremely dear, $1000 or so an acre. It is all native owned, as no European can get natives to work for him, even if he succeeds in buying a piece of land.

I hope I have made this description interesting to you. It was certainly a very instructive afternoon for us.

30th.—A letter from you at last. I have not missed any, but they seem very slow in coming.

I was not at church to-day as I have been on duty nearly all the time.
We got two pneumonia cases in to-day and they require a lot of attention.

to the pyramids this afternoon with thirty patients. Not particularly interesting to us, but it was an afternoon's outing, which is something.

Mail goes out in the morning, so I

KENNETH.

Italy to Declare War On Germany Promptly

LONDON, Feb. 29.—Great interest is being displayed here in the possibility of a declaration of war on Germany by Italy when the Italian Parliament opens. At the date of adjournment in December it was stated that parliament would be convened March 1.

According to Rome despatches, the Italian Government has not yet decided whether it will yield to the popular demand for a war with Germany. The Italian newspapers as-tion on the subject in parliament only if the government was pressed to do so.

LONDON EXPECTS ATTACKS ON WHOLE WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, Feb. 28.—With all the resources at his command the Kaiser is now striking for an immediate and overwhelming German victory, planned to end the world war. The great onslaught directed against Verdun is but the prelude to a grand assault by the Germans along the whole western front—the most tremendous offensive movement the world has ever seen.

Prince Henry of Prussia has taken over a high command in the German navy, preliminary to the beginning of the new submarine campaign against armed merchantmen at the stroke of midnight Tuesday.

London is tense with excitement, waiting for news that the German fleet is coming out to give battle in the North Sea, or the signals warning of the approach of a great Zeppelin fleet.

"It is the real thing at last," wrote the military critic of the Times to-day. "The decision of the enemy to put his fortunes to the touch will be received with fierce delight by every allied regiment in the west."

Col. Repington says: "It is believed that 25 German divisions are engaged in the attack on Verdun and a mass of heavy guns. It is possible that General Von Beseler is now in charge.

"We must regard Verdun as only a part of the allied line, not as a fortress with its attributes. The permanence of forts has ceased to have meaning in this war owing to the highly-developed power of heavy howitzers.

"All that has happened at present is that a particularly vulnerable salient has been flattened out, as other salients have been before, under an overwhelming mass of heavy projectiles.

"We must expect to hear that our allies have lost men and guns, but the price paid by the Germans appears to be out of all proportion to the gains, and the general security of the allied lines is not seriously menaced. Nor would it be were the whole right bank of the Meuse at Verdun to fall into German hands, as any position may if the Germans are prepared to pay the price we exact from them. The loss of this little strip of ground would not be vital, while the price to be paid would be out of all proportion to the success."

Coderre Must Pay Penalty of Crime

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The appeal of Georges Coderre against the sentence of death for the murder of Sergeant Ozanne, was heard before the court of criminal appeal to-day. Foote, K.
C., who represented him at Winchester, argued all morning before the lord chief justice and Messrs. Justices Lawrence and Atkin, but the arguments did not make much impression.
The entire grounds of appeal were based on the prisoner's alleged mental instability.

Coderre's appeal was dismissed without calling upon counsel for the crown.

Coderre was a Canadian soldier who came from Sherbrooke, Quebec. His parents came here to support the appeal.

PENROD

by Booth
TARKINGTON

"Shut up!" cried Penrod, irritated. "Go to heaven; go to —!"

"Oo-o-oh!" exclaimed Georgie Bassett, profoundly shocked.

Sam and Maurice, awed by Penrod's daring, ceased from turmoil, staring wide eyed.

"You cursed and swore!" said Georgie.

"I did not!" cried Penrod hotly. "That isn't swearing."

"You said, 'Go to a big H!'" said Georgie.

"I did not! I said, 'Go to heaven,' before I said a big H. That isn't swearing, is it, Herman? It's almost what the preacher said. Ain't it, Herman? It ain't swearing now any more — not if you put 'go to heaven' with it. Is it, Herman? You can say it all you want to, long as you say 'go to heaven' first. Can't you, Herman? Anybody can say it if the preacher says it. Can't they, Herman? I guess I know when I ain't swearing. Don't I, Herman?"

Judge Herman ruled for the defendant, and Penrod was considered to have carried his point. With fine consistency the conclave established that it was proper for the general public to "say it" provided "go to heaven"

could! I could too!"

But it relieved him only temporarily. His tormentors were unaffected by it and increased their howlings until at last Georgie lost his head altogether. Badgered beyond bearing, his eyes shining with a wild light, he broke through the besieging trio, hurling little Maurice from his path with a frantic hand.

"I'll show you!" he cried in this sudden frenzy. "You give me a chance, and I'll prove it right now!"

"That's talkin' business!" shouted Penrod. "Everybody! keep still a minute — everybody!"

He took command of the situation at once, displaying a fine capacity for organization and system. It needed only a few minutes to set order in the place of confusion and to determine, with the full concurrence of all parties, the conditions under which Georgie Bassett was to defend his claim by undergoing what may be perhaps intelligibly defined as the Herman test. Georgie declared he could do it easily. He was in a state of great excitement and in no condition to think calmly or probably he would not have made the attempt at all. Certainly he was overconfident.

It was during the discussion of the details of this enterprise that Georgie's mother a short distance down the street received a few female callers, who came by appointment to drink a glass of iced tea with her and to meet the Rev. Mr. Kinosling. Mr. Kinosling was proving almost formidably interesting to the women and girls of his own and other flocks. What favor of his fellow clergymen a slight preciousness of manner and pronunciation cost him was more than balanced by the visible ecstasies of ladies. They blossomed at his touch.

He had just entered Mrs. Bassett's front door when the son of the house, followed by an intent and earnest company of four, opened the alley gate and came into the yard. The unconscious Mrs. Bassett was about to have her first experience of a fatal coincidence. It was her first, because she was the mother of a boy so well behaved that he had become a proverb of transcendence. Fatal coincidences

rod. I think it would make him a better boy."

A sibilance went about the room. "Sweet! How sweet! The sweet little soul. Ah, sweet!"

"And that very afternoon," continued Mrs. Bassett, "he had come home in a dreadful state. Penrod had thrown tar all over him."

"Your son has a forgiving spirit," said Mr. Kinosling, with vehemence; "a too forgiving spirit perhaps." He set down his glass. "No more, I thank you. No more cake, I thank you. Was it not Cardinal Newman who said?"

He was interrupted by the sounds of an altercation just outside the closed blinds of the window nearest him.

"Let him pick his tree." It was the voice of Samuel Williams. "Didn't we come over here to give him one of his own trees? Give him a fair show, can't you?"

"The little lads!" Mr. Kinosling smiled. "They have their games, their outdoor sports, their pastimes. The young muscles are toughening. The sun will not harm them. They grow, they expand, they learn. They learn fair play, honor, courtesy, from one another as pebbles grow round in the brook. They learn more from themselves than from us. They take shape, form, outline. Let them."

"Mr. Kinosling!" Another splinter — undeterred by what had happened to Miss Beam — leaned far forward, her face shining and ardent. "Mr. Kinosling, there's a question I do wish to ask you."

"My dear Miss Cossitt," Mr. Kinosling responded, again waving his hand and watching it, "I am entirely at your disposal."

"Was Joan of Arc," she asked fervently, "inspired by spirits?"

He smiled indulgently. "Yes — and no," he said. "One must give both answers. One must give the answer, yes; one must give the answer, no."

"Oh, thank you!" said Miss Cossitt, blushing. "She's one of my great enthusiasms, you know."

"And I have a question, too," urged Mrs. Lora Rewbush after a moment's hasty concentration. "I've never been able to settle it for myself, but now?"

"Yes?" said Mr. Kinosling encouragingly.

"Is — ab — is — oh, yes — is Sanskrit a more difficult language than Spanish, Mr. Kinosling?"

"It depends upon the student," replied the oracle, smiling. "One must not look for linguists everywhere. In my own especial case — if one may cite oneself as an example — I found no great, no insurmountable difficulty in mastering, in conquering either."

"And may I ask one?" ventured Mrs. Bassett. "Do you think it is right to wear egrets?"

"There are marks of quality, of caste, of social distinction," Mr. Kinosling began, "which must be permitted, allowed, though perhaps regulated. Social distinction, one observes, almost invariably implies spiritual distinction as well. Distinction of circumstances is accompanied by mental distinction. Distinction is hereditary. It descends from father to son, and if there is one thing more true than 'like father, like son,' it is" — he bowed gallantly to Mrs. Bassett — "it is 'like mother, like son.' What these good ladies have said this afternoon of your" —

THIS busy globe whirled us as is incapable and as intent upon fair, whatever that roscoe. It keeps steadily along its lawful track, and seeming to hold a right of doggedly on, with no perception of speed to mark the gantic human events. It did to pant and recuperate what seemed to Penrod its purpose was accomplished, a mous shadow, vanishing over its surface, marked th his twelfth birthday.

To be twelve is an attainment the struggle. A boy, just like a Frenchman just elec academy.

should in all cases precede it. This prefix was pronounced a perfect disinfectant, removing all odor of impleity or insult, and, with the exception of Georgie Bassett (who maintained that the minister's words were "going" and "gone," not "go"), all the boys proceeded to exercise their new privilege so lavishly that they tired of it.

But there was no diminution of evangelical ardor. Again were heard the clamors of dispute as to which was the best qualified for the ministry, each of the claimants appealing passionately to Herman, who, pleased, but confused, appeared to be incapable of arriving at a decision.

During a pause Georgie Bassett asserted his prior rights. "Who said it first, I'd like to know?" he demanded. "I was going to be a minister from long back of today, I guess. And I guess I said I was going to be a minister right today before any of you said anything at all. Didn't I, Herman? You heard me. Didn't you, Herman? That's the very thing started you talking about it. Wasn't it, Herman?"

"You're right," said Herman. "You're the first one to say it."

Penrod, Sam and Maurice immediately lost faith in Herman. They turned from him and fell hotly upon Georgie.

"What if you did say it first?" Penrod shouted. "You couldn't be a minister if you were a hundred years old!"

"I bet his mother wouldn't let him be one," said Sam. "She never lets him do anything."

"She would too," retorted Georgie. "Ever since I was little she!"

"He's too sissy to be a preacher!" cried Maurice. "Listen at his squeaky voice!"

"I'm going to be a better minister," shouted Georgie, "than all three of you put together. I could do it with my left hand!"

CHAPTER XX.

Conclusion of the Quiet Afternoon.

THE three laughed bitingly in chorus. They jeered, derided, scoffed and raised an uproar which would have had its effect upon much stronger nerves than Georgie's. For a time he contained his rising choler and chanted monotonously over and over: "I could! I could too! I could! I could too!" But their tumult wore upon him, and he decided to avail himself of the recent decision whereby a big H was rendered innocuous and unprofane. Having used the expression once, he found it comforting and substituted it for "I dence. It was her first, because she was the mother of a boy so well behaved that he had become a proverb of transcendence. Fatal coincidences were plentiful in the Schofield and Williams families and would have been familiar to Mrs. Bassett had Georgie been permitted greater intimacy with Penrod and Sam.

Mr. Kinosling sipped his iced tea and looked about him approvingly. Seven ladies leaned forward, for it was to be seen that he meant to speak.

"This cool room is a relief," he said, waving a graceful hand to a neatly limited gesture, which everybody's eyes followed, his own included. "It is a relief and a retreat. The windows open, the blinds closed—that is as it should be. It is a retreat, a fastness, a bastion against the heat's assault. For me a quiet room—a quiet room and a book, a volume in the hand, held lightly between the fingers—a volume of poems, lines metrical and cadenced, something by a sound Victorian. We have no later poets."

"Swinburne?" suggested Miss Beam, an eager spinster. "Swinburne, Mr. Kinosling? Ah, Swinburne!"

"Not Swinburne," said Mr. Kinosling chastely. "No."

That concluded all the remarks about Swinburne.

Miss Beam retired in confusion behind another lady, and somehow there became diffused an impression that Miss Beam was erotic.

"I do not observe your manly little son," Mr. Kinosling addressed his hostess.

"He's out playing in the yard," Mrs. Bassett returned. "I heard his voice just now, I think."

"Everywhere I hear wonderful reports of him," said Mr. Kinosling. "I may say that I understand boys, and I feel that he is a rare, a fine, a pure, a lofty spirit. I say spirit, for spirit is the word I hear spoken of him."

A chorus of enthusiastic approbation affirmed the accuracy of this proclamation, and Mrs. Bassett flushed with pleasure. Georgie's spiritual perfection was demonstrated by instances of it related by the visitors. His piety was noted, and wonderful things he had said were quoted.

"Not all boys are pure, of fine spirit, of high mind," said Mr. Kinosling, and continued with true feeling: "You have a neighbor, dear Mrs. Bassett, whose household I indeed really feel it quite impossible to visit until such time when better, firmer, stronger handed, more determined discipline shall prevail. I find Mr. and Mrs. Schofield and their daughter charming, but"—

Three or four ladies said "Oh!" and spoke a name simultaneously. It was as if they had said, "Oh, the bubonic plague!"

"Oh! Penrod Schofield!"

"Georgie does not play with him," said Mrs. Bassett quickly—"that is, he avoids him as much as he can without hurting Penrod's feelings. Georgie is very sensitive to giving pain. I suppose a mother should not tell these things, and I know people who talk about their own children are dreadful bores, but it was only last Thursday night that Georgie looked up in my face so sweetly after he had said his prayers, and his little cheeks flushed as he said: 'Mamma, I think it would be right for me to go more with Pen-son,' it is"—he bowed gallantly to Mrs. Bassett—"it is 'like mother, like son.' What these good ladies have said this afternoon of you!"

This was the fatal instant. There smote upon all ears the voice of Georgie, painfully shrill and penetrating, fraught with protest and protracted strain. His plain words consisted of the newly sanctioned and disinfected curse with a big H.

With an ejaculation of horror Mrs. Bassett sprang to the window and threw open the blinds.

Georgie's back was disclosed to the view of the tea party. He was endeavoring to ascend a maple tree about twelve feet from the window. Embracing the trunk with arms and legs, he had managed to squirm to a point just above the heads of Penrod and Herman, who stood close by, watching him earnestly. Penrod being obviously in charge of the performance. Across the yard were Sam Williams and Maurice Levy, acting as a jury on the question of voice power, and it was to a complaint of theirs that Georgie had just replied.

"That's right, Georgie," said Penrod encouragingly. "They can't hear you. Let her go!"

"Going to heaven!" shrieked Georgie, squirming up another inch. "Going to heaven, heaven, heaven!"

His mother's frenzied attempts to attract his attention failed utterly. Georgie was using the full power of his lungs, deafening his own ears to all other sounds. Mrs. Bassett called in vain, while the tea party stood petrified in a cluster about the window.

"Going to heaven!" Georgie bellowed. "Going to heaven! Going to heaven, my Lord! Going to heaven, heaven, heaven!"

He tried to climb higher, but began to slip downward, his exertions causing damage to his apparel. A button flew into the air, and his knickerbockers and his waistband severed relations.

"Devil's got my coattails, sinners! Old devil's got my coattails!" he announced appropriately. Then he began to slide. He relaxed his clasp of the tree and slid to the ground.

"Going to —!" shrieked Georgie, reaching a high pitch of enthusiasm in this great climax.

With a loud scream Mrs. Bassett threw herself out of the window, alighting by some miracle upon her feet with ankles unsprained.

Mr. Kinosling, feeling that his presence as spiritual adviser was demanded in the yard, followed with greater dignity through the front door. At the corner of the house a small departing figure collided with him violently. It was Penrod, tactfully withdrawing from what promised to be a family scene of unusual painfulness.

Mr. Kinosling seized him by the shoulders and, giving way to emotion, shook him viciously.

"You horrible boy!" exclaimed Mr. Kinosling. "You ruffianly creature! Do you know what's going to happen to you when you grow up? Do you realize what you're going to be?"

With flashing eyes the indignant boy made known his unshaken purpose. He shouted the reply:

"A minister!"

a boy's "slingshot," made of a forked

Aunt Sarah laughed heartily. "Do

"Oh, Aunt Sarah!" Mrs. Schofield lifted a protesting hand.

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Crim.

"But on his birthday!"

"That's the time to say it. Penrod, aren't you the worst boy in town?"

Penrod, gazing fondly upon his knife and eating cookies rapidly, answered as a matter of course and absently, "Yes'm."

"Certainly!" said Mrs. Crim. "Once you accept a thing about yourself as established and settled it's all right. Nobody minds. Boys are just like people really."

"No, no!" Mrs. Schofield cried involuntarily.

"Yes, they are," returned Aunt Sarah. "Only they're not quite so awful, because they haven't learned to cover themselves all over with little pretences. When Penrod grows up he'll be just the same as he is now, except that whenever he does what he wants to do he'll tell himself and other people a little story about it to make his reason for doing it seem nice and pretty and noble."

"No, I won't!" said Penrod suddenly. "There's one cookie left," observed Aunt Sarah. "Are you going to eat it?"

"Well," said her great-nephew thoughtfully, "I guess I better."

"Why?" asked the old lady. "Why do you guess you'd better?"

"Well," said Penrod, with a full mouth, "it might get all dried up if nobody took it and get thrown out and wasted."

"You're beginning finely," Mrs. Crim remarked. "A year ago you'd have taken the cookie without the same sense of thrift."

"Ma'am?"

"Nothing. I see that you're twelve years old, that's all. There are more cookies. Penrod," She went away, returning with a fresh supply and the observation: "Of course you'll be sick before the day's over. You might as well get a good start."

Mrs. Schofield looked thoughtful. "Aunt Sarah," she ventured, "don't you really think we improve as we get older?"

"Meaning," said the old lady, "that Penrod hasn't much chance to escape the penitentiary if he doesn't? Well, we do learn to restrain ourselves in some things, and there are people who really want some one else to take the last cookie, though they aren't very common. But it's all right. The world seems to be getting on." She gazed whimsically upon her great-nephew and added, "Of course when you watch a boy and think about him it doesn't seem to be getting on very fast."

Penrod moved unasily in his chair. He was conscious that he was her topic, but unable to make out whether or not her observations were complimentary. He inclined to think they were not. Mrs. Crim settled the question for him.

"I suppose Penrod is regarded as the neighborhood curse?"

"Oh, no!" cried Mrs. Schofield. "He—"

"I daresay the neighbors are right," whenever you don't behave like a novice she's disappointed in you. And your father really believes that you're a decorous, well trained young business man, and whenever you don't live up to that standard you get on his nerves, and he thinks you need a wallop. I'm sure a day very seldom passes without their both saying they don't know what on earth to do with you. Does whipping do you any good, Penrod?"

"Ma'am?"

"Go on and finish the lemonade. There's about a glassful left. Oh, take it, take it, and don't say why! Of course you're a little pig."

Penrod laughed gratefully, his eyes fixed upon her over the rim of his up tilted glass.

"Fill yourself up uncomfortably," said the old lady. "You're twelve years old, and you ought to be happy—if you aren't anything else. It's taken over 1,900 years of Christianity and some hundreds of thousands of years of other things to produce you, and there you sit!"

"Ma'am?"

"It'll be your turn to struggle and muss things up for the betterment of posterity soon enough," said Aunt Sarah Crim. "Drink your lemonade!"

"Aunt Sarah's a funny old lady," Penrod observed on the way back to the town. "What's she want me to give papa this old sling for? Last thing she said was to be sure not to forget to give it to him. He don't want it, and she said herself it ain't any good. She's older than you or papa, isn't she?"

"About fifty years older," answered Mrs. Schofield, turning upon him a stare of perplexity. "Don't cut into the leather with your new knife, dear. The liverman might ask us to pay it— No, I wouldn't scrape the paint off either—nor whittle your shoe with it. Couldn't you put it up until we get home?"

"We goin' straight home?"

"No. We're going to stop at Mrs. Gelbraith's and ask a strange little girl to come to your party this afternoon."

"Who?"

"Her name is Fanchon. She's Mrs. Gelbraith's little niece."

"What makes her so queer?"

"I didn't say she's queer."

"You said—"

unexpectedly, and a dark haired, demure person entered the room wearing a look of gracious social expectancy. In years she was eleven, in manner about sixty-five, and evidently had lived much at court. She performed a courtesy in acknowledgment of Mrs. Schofield's greeting and bestowed her hand upon Penrod, who had entertained no hope of such an honor, showed his surprise that it should come to him and was plainly unable to decide what to do about it.

"Fanchon, dear," said Mrs. Gelbraith, "take Penrod out in the yard for a while and play."

"Let go the little girl's hand, Penrod," Mrs. Schofield laughed as the children turned toward the door.

CHAPTER XXII.

Fanchon.

PENROD hastily dropped the small hand and, exclaiming, with simple honesty, "Why, I don't want it!" followed Fanchon out into the sunshiny yard, where they came to a halt and surveyed each other.

Penrod stared awkwardly at Fanchon, no other occupation suggesting itself to him, while Fanchon, with the utmost coolness, made a very thorough visual examination of Penrod, favoring him with an estimating scrutiny which lasted until he literally wiggled. Finally she spoke.

"Where do you buy your ties?" she asked.

"What?"

"Where do you buy your neckties? Papa gets his at Skoone's. You ought to get yours there. I'm sure the one you're wearing isn't from Skoone's."

"Skoone's?" Penrod repeated.

"Skoone's?"

"On Fifth avenue," said Fanchon. "It's a very smart shop, the men say."

"Men?" echoed Penrod in a hazy whisper. "Men?"

"Where do your people go in summer?" inquired the lady. "We go to Long Shore, but so many middle class people have begun coming there mamma thinks of leaving. The middle classes are simply awful, don't you think?"

COMFORT FOR FARM WOMEN.

The Simplest Way of Getting Running Water Into the Kitchen.

The convenience and comfort of having running water at least in the kitchen and in the bathroom if possible are so well recognized that engineering specialists have been giving attention to the simplest as well as to the more expensive methods of saving the farm housewife the carrying of water in buckets from the well or spring up the porch steps and through doors into the house.

Almost any system of obtaining running water in the kitchen is better than none at all. If the well or cistern is located within a short distance of the house about the simplest and perhaps the cheapest method is a force pump, which not only raises water to its own level by suction, but forces it to greater heights, according to the power applied. The pump may be placed over the well or in any other convenient spot as long as the suction lift does not exceed twenty feet. A three-way valve on such a pump permits the operator to direct the water to the tank or through the pump spout, as desired. The pump may be operated by hand, but where much water is to be pumped to a considerable height a windmill, a small gas engine, or an electric motor will save much time and exertion. If the location of the pump, which should be convenient to the engine, necessitates a long suction line the size of the pipe should be increased and all unnecessary bends or fittings avoided in order to lessen the friction.

The great objection to an elevated tank system is that in the colder climates there is danger of the water in the tank freezing. This is particularly objectionable when the tank is located in the attic, where considerable damage may be caused if it should burst. It is also necessary to provide an especially strong support for the tank. Another objection is that if located in the attic the tank is likely to catch considerable filth. It should in such cases be easily accessible for more or less frequent cleaning. It is well also to cover the tank to prevent, as far as possible, the entrance of dirt and vermin, and when placed on a tower outside it should be covered to prevent the breeding of mosquitoes.

The great advantages of this system are its cheapness and simplicity. All that is needed are a force pump, a storage tank, a pipe from the pump to the tank, a pipe from the tank to the point at which water is used and accompanying fixtures. The tank should have an overflow pipe, particularly if located in the attic.

Dirt in the Milk.

Much of the dirt found in milk gets there during the milking. Any pail that will keep out cow hairs, dandruff, dust, pieces of dried manure, chaff, and hay is a good pail. The

Scientific Farming

ERADICATING QUACK GRASS.

Methods Are Based on Knowledge of Its Habits and Growth.

A series of experiments for the eradication of quack grass has been carried on in the West, where the weed is a great pest. In some instances farms have had to be abandoned to it. Following is a summary of the results of the experiments:

Methods for successfully preventing the spread of quack grass and for eradicating it are based on knowledge of its habits of growth.

Quack grass seed will grow even if the plant is cut before the seed is mature. In order to prevent quack grass from developing seeds to the point where they will germinate, crops in which it is growing should be cut not later than the last week in June.

Young quack grass plants, attacked before they have formed underground stems, are as easily killed as plants of wheat or other grains of the same age.

Manure containing quack grass seed may be applied on plowed ground before preparing the soil for a cultivated crop. The seed will grow the same season, and the young plants will be killed in the preparation of the seed bed and the cultivation of the crop.

THE LAND'S FIRST

Fertility is the first farming. It is the first operation in placing a new land. It is first when old farms are so the first problem that the beginner as well as the expert who takes up the cultivation of new crops on it. It is first in a list of asked by those seeking farming. The solution of fertility problem makes many problems comparatively solve.

The quick and easy fertility is to buy it. It is first in the form of commercial fertilizers or a load in the form of manure.

But this method of fertility requires cash capital and does not fulfill all the need of land. Since we have that a fertile soil is a source of mineral and vegetable, teeming with fermenting with minute plants and changes, we have learned soil needs more than mineral plant foods to encourage the maximum crop.

It has long been known that legumes and green manure are beneficial to soils, but recently have we learned these green manures keep soil up permanently at it up at the lowest cost.

SAVE FERTILIZER

Ingredients Existing in May Be Utilized and

In the unusual condition in the fertilizer trade, it is that all fertilizing material, especially those containing ash, should be conserved. Fertilizer ingredients already in the soil should be utilized to the fullest extent. A deal can be accomplished by deep plowing, cultivation and thorough rotation. Especially when it has been grown for several different ones should be year. Green manures and should be used as much as their proper rotation.

Of the organic substances both solid and liquid, is a potent and should be used ever possible. All material of various nature, such as leading of various sorts, should be posted and the compost a soil. Special attention given also to the conservation of wood ashes. Depending on the act of the wood, they are in quantities varying from 3 to 10 per cent. trimmings, brush cut should be burned and the residue therefrom utilized.

The application of lime to soils is of undoubted benefit to the availability of the

to place a pitcher or other pump over a sink in the kitchen and extend the suction pipe to the well. The suction lift should not exceed twenty feet or the pump will not operate satisfactorily, if at all. It should also suction pipe to the well. The suction lift should not exceed twenty feet or the pump will not operate satisfactorily, if at all. It should also be remembered that water flowing through a pipe meets with considerable resistance due to friction, which increases as the velocity of the water and the length of the pipe increase and as the diameter of the pipe diminishes. Elbows and bends in the pipe greatly increase the friction. Pump manufacturers give information in regard to this frictional loss, which should always be considered in arranging a pumping system in the kitchen or elsewhere.

An elevated water supply tank may be placed in the attic, on the roof, on the windmill tower, on a special tower, or on the silo. It must be high enough to give the desired pressure at points where the water is used. The tank may be of wood or galvanized metal. Its size will depend on the amount of water used daily in the house. A 250 to 500-gallon tank is sufficient for the average family, although some have a much larger tank, so that a supply sufficient to last several days may be maintained. A larger tank is also necessary where water is supplied to the house and barns.

The simplest system of this kind is one with the tank in the attic or on the roof, supplying water to the kitchen only. When the expense can be afforded a hot water tank connected with the range may be placed in the kitchen and the water plumbing be extended to a bathroom.

The pump for this system must be difference between open and closed pails in the matter of cleanliness is considerable. The less open space the less opportunity for dirt and bacteria to get into the pail while the cow is being milked. On most dairy farms the old style pail with the flaring top has been replaced by something that will aid in keeping out the dirt.

SOME BEE WISDOM.

"Any old thing" does not make a suitable hive in which to keep bees. Queens are mated but once in their lives and then out in the open air.

Beating the dishpan or ringing the dinner bell never settled a swarm; they just naturally cluster after leaving the hive.

Bees have no more to do with the scattering of fruit diseases than do the other hundreds of insects that visit the flowers.

It is not a sign of ability to make a practice of trying to handle bees without smoker or veil; it's just foolhardiness.

It does not pay to keep more colonies than can be properly cared for. Better sell off some than buy more and not care for them.

To Succeed With Alfalfa.

Almost every farmer is interested in growing alfalfa. Some have tried it and failed. Many have succeeded and are reaping the benefits of this wonderful crop for live stock farms. As a hay crop it excels all others in yields, feeding value, drought resistance, and soil enrichment. Yet it is not advisable to attempt to grow alfalfa under all circumstances. It is a rather particular crop, requiring certain soil conditions and proper treatment. The beginner in alfalfa growing must first of all be a student of alfalfa. He must study the crop and learn its requirements. If he is not willing to pay attention to such important details as inoculation, liming, proper seeding methods, and cutting at the proper stage he had better not try to grow alfalfa.

Overhaul Machinery.

Inspect the engines, motors, pumps and other machinery about the farm, and make frequent use of the oil can.

Cheese Prices Good.

With cheese from nineteen to nineteen and a quarter, factories have poor excuses for closing down for the winter.

the same season, and the young plants will be killed in the preparation of the seed bed and the cultivation of the crop.

Digging by hand and removing from the field all portions of the plant, smothering with tar paper and spraying with a solution of sodium arsenite are best for the complete eradication of quack grass on small spots.

All methods of eradication on large fields are based on thorough tillage.

The implements found on any well equipped farm are all that are needed to eradicate quack grass.

The most effective bare fallow method of eradication was plowing in July three or four inches deep, re-plowing not later than Aug. 15 five or six inches deep, and again in November six or seven inches deep. The disk was used as needed between plowings to keep the quack grass from showing green above ground. The cost of the additional labor necessary for complete eradication under this system was $9.60 per acre. No crop was secured from the land that season.

Complete eradication of quack grass while following a system of crop rotation was found practical when more than the ordinary amount of tillage was given.

Tillage given now and then when nothing else needs immediate attention is largely lost effort in the eradication of quack grass. To be effective there must be a well planned and carefully carried out campaign with which other work is not allowed to interfere. Tillage operations should injure the quack grass as much as possible and should be repeated often enough to make effective the work that has preceded.

Eradication of quack grass on land that has been plowed each year is more difficult than on land that has been undisturbed for a number of years.

In carrying out the different rotations a regular plan of "cleanup" to eradicate the quack grass was followed on each field with uniformly successful results. The plan was varied on three of the fields to secure additional data.

A four-year rotation on four fields, each one in turn having in successive years grain, hay, corn, and corn, gives exceptional opportunity for the eradication of quack grass. This rotation can be followed to advantage, especially on fields where quack grass is very vigorous or when weather conditions make the eradication unusually difficult.

Rhubarb From Seed.

The usual practice is to propagate rhubarb from pieces of root, but it is practical and easy to grow the plants from seed. By planting seed in very rich, well prepared soil where the plants are to remain permanently stalks may be had ready for cutting about as soon as when root planting is followed.

DO IT NOW.

STRENGTH AND BEAUTY
Come with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is a blood cleanser and alternative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, strong and strenuous instead of tired, weak and faint.

Why "Anuric" is an INSURANCE Against Sudden Death.

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of his new discovery, "Anuric." Write him your symptoms and send a sample of urine for test. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid, as hot water melts sugar; besides being absolutely harmless it is endowed with other properties, for it preserves the kidneys in a healthy condition by thoroughly cleansing them. Being so many times more active than lithia, it clears the heart valves of any sandy substances which may clog them and checks the degeneration of the blood-vessels, as well as regulating blood pressure. "Anuric" is a regular insurance and life-saver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime-salts in their joints. Ask the druggist for "Anuric" put up by Dr. Pierce, in 50-cent packages.

"Ships of Fate."

As nuts are plentiful at this time of the year, the following game can easily be played:

Prepare as many half shells of walnuts as there are guests. In each fasten a small candle with a drop of wax.

Fill a tub with water, and before sailing the boats the water should be agitated, so as to have it wavy. Two at a time may sail their boats, lighting their candles as they do so. The life of the owner is prophesied by the seaworthy qualities of his ship.

If the storm overcomes the ship the owner will be wrecked by adversity. The ship sailing across the tub signifies a long sea voyage, while those remaining by the side show that the person loves home better.

If the two ships stay together throughout the trip the couple owning them will have a happy marriage. If they bump together that signifies a quarrel, and if they sail in opposite directions each person will lead a single life.

Boy Scouts of Hawaii.

Under the heading "Scouting In Hawaii" Scouting prints the following:

A. A. Wilder, special field scout commissioner for Hawaii, reports that scouting is booming in these island possessions of the United States. Plans are being made for raising a budget to carry on the work in a more systematic manner and to extend the benefits of the movement to a greater number of boys. A contribution of $1.

Leap Year, Hurrah!

The London Sketch of Dec. 15 contains in Phrynette's breezy letter of the week's doings an amusing account of a sketch by Barrie, given recently at Sunderland House. The playlet is entitled "The Typist's Mistake," and the mistake was none other than that of reversing the parts in the play she was copying, so that the man utters what was intended to be the lady's speeches, while the lady speaks the man's lines.

"I watched," says Phrynette, "several women, noting with joy Gladys Cooper's masterly wooings of the coy male, and a fearful thought struck me. Perhaps that is how, after the war, we'll have to woo and win you!"

Not merely "after the war," Phrynette, nor yet "have to." Isn't this leap year? And what of the everlasting now?

"Women have had to do a lot of waiting," says Nellie L. McClung in her book "In Times Like These."

 "Long, weary waiting. The well-brought up young lady diligently prepares for marriage—makes dollies and hemstitches linen, gets her blue trunk ready and—waits. She must not appear anxious or concerned—not at all. She must just—wait. When a young man comes along and shows her any attention she may accept it, but if, after two or three years of it, he suddenly leaves her and devotes himself to some other girl she must go back and sit down beside the blue trunk again and—wait! He has merely exercised the man's right of choosing, and when he decides that he does not want her she has no grounds for complaint.

"She may see a young man to whom she feels attracted, but she must not show it by even so much as the flicker of an eyelash. Hers is the waiting part. No more crushing criticism can be made of a woman than that she is anxious to get married. It is all right for her to be passively willing, but she must not be anxious. She must wait.

"Why should not women have the same privilege as men to choose their mates? Marriage means more to a woman than to a man. She brings in a larger contribution than her care and upbringing of the children depend upon her faithfulness, not on his. Why should she not have the privilege of choosing?

"The time will come, we hope, when women will be economically free and mentally and spiritually independent enough to refuse to have their food paid for by men; when women will receive equal pay for equal work and have all avenues of activity open to them and will be free to choose their own mates without shame or indelicacy and when men will not be afraid of marriage because of the financial burden, but free men and free women will marry for love and together work for the sustenance of their families. It is not too ideal a thought."

Please notice the simplicity and distinction of the perfect tailoring this coat has had lavished on it. The shoulders are finished with a cape effect, held down by two little buttons. FOOD AND CHARACTER.

How Different Diets Bring Out Various Traits In Nations.

It is proved that today the wheat eating nations lead the meat eating nations. There are some interesting observations on the subject.

The succulence and flavor of meat depend not only upon careful cooking, but on what the animal was fed with. In the same way the meat and food we eat influence our characters.

Englishmen are "beef fed," and to that they owe their stolid and tolerant characters, slow to move to enthusi-

The fertilizers already existing in the soil could be utilized and developed to the fullest extent. Plans are also being made for the sixth annual rally to be held on Washington's birthday. It has been suggested that scouts from all the islands in the group be invited to attend and that this be made the first of a series of interisland gatherings.

Hole in the Ice.

A game that is great fun to play is called "hole in the ice." The hole, or crack, in the ice is represented by two chalk lines on the floor. One row of children at a time runs or jumps in turn, trying to jump over the hole. If any one touches the floor between the lines instead of going home to his seat he must first come to the front of the room, while the others are jumping, and dry his feet by running on tiptoe "on the ice." The width of the crack may be gradually increased so as to make this game more difficult.

The Two Misses.

Little Miss Hurry,
All bustle and flurry,
Comes down to her breakfast ten minutes too late;
Her hair is a-rumple,
Her gown is a-crumple,
She's no time to button and hook herself straight.
She hunts and she rushes
For needles and brushes,
For books and for pencils flies upstairs and down.
If ever you find her
Just follow behind her
A trail of shoe buttons and shreds of her gown.

But little Miss Steady
By school time is ready,
All smiling and shining and neat in her place;
With no need to worry,
She pities Miss Hurry,
Who but yesterday sat here with shame in her face.
Her heart beating lightly
With duty done rightly,
She vowed she will never again change her name.
For though you'd not guess it,
I'm bound to confess it,
These two little maidens are one and the same.

Soft Gingerbread

One teaspoonful of molasses, one-third cupful of butter, one and three-quarter teaspoonfuls of soda, one-half cupful of sour milk, one egg, two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of ginger and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Put butter and molasses in saucepan and cook until boiling point is reached; remove from fire, add soda and beat vigorously. Then add milk, egg, well beaten, and remaining ingredients, mixed and sifted. Bake about twenty-five minutes in a hot oven.

Guncotton Amber.

Nitrocotton that produces such powerful powder also produces a beautiful imitation of amber. Claim is made that if one buys a meerscham pipe with an amber piece six inches long at what seems to be an unusually low price, one may rely upon it being colledion—a solution of guncotton in ether. The cloudy effect which some smokers like is produced by a large amount of camphor in the solution. Nitrocotton also produces a fine substitute for tortoise shell.

Snow Pudding.

Three tablespoonfuls lemon juice, one teaspoonful grated lemon rind, whites of three eggs, two tablespoonfuls granulated gelatin and one cupful sugar. Soak the gelatin in two tablespoonfuls cold water ten minutes. Dissolve in the boiling water, in which the sugar is dissolved. Add the lemon juice and rind and set aside to cool. Have the whites of eggs beaten until dry, place in pan of cold water, add the gelatin very slowly, beating all the time until it begins to set. Pour into melon mold or bowl which has been rinsed with cold water, set in cold place until ready to use.

Potted Cheese.

From a pound of rich cheese cut away all the rind and with a fork mash it fine. Work into it one-quarter of a teaspoonful of cayenne, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of made mustard and from two to three tablespoonfuls of best brandy, according to the dryness of the cheese. Sufficient is needed to make it just moist enough to pack well. Work down into small jars, seal and keep in a cool place.

we eat influence our characters.

Englishmen are "beef fed," and to that they owe their stolid and tolerant characters, slow to move to enthusiasm, with a great liking for compromise and toleration and a big facility for forgiveness.

The porridge of the Scot makes him argumentative and opinionated, and the restless vivacity of the Irishman is due to his potato diet.

A famous actor carried his belief in the influence of food so far as to vary his menu according to the character he was playing, eating pork for tyrants, beef for murderers and mutton for lovers.

This may have been taking matters to extremes, but it is a fact that mutton lovers are generally of a quiet temperament and given to sentiment, while big beef eaters are more often than not of a choleric, fierce character.

Observations of regular pork eaters have not justified the allegation that they are tyrannical, but certainly pork is different from other meats, and noted bullies have been extraordinarily fond of pork chops. Fat bacon produces a lethargic character—slow in thought and action.

It is alleged that vegetarianism makes clear thinkers, but moody characters.

Last, but not least, big bread eaters are of a dominating character and become natural leaders.

London's Windmill.

New Zealand, we are informed, now boasts only a single windmill. In this respect London is equal with the Antipodes. On Brixton hill, just by the waterworks and only a few yards from the main road, stands an old mill intact with the exception of the sails, and still in use, though now electricity takes the place of wind as motive power. The mill was erected by a Quaker about a century ago, and has remained in the family ever since.—London Chronicle.

Keen Scented Deer.

Under the most favorable atmospheric conditions deer can scent a man at the distance of a mile and a half. If he is smoking the range may be increased to two miles. They have been known to refuse to cross a man's track more than four hours after he had passed, but rain may destroy the scent in ten minutes.—St. James' Gazette.

Miss Stares, of Hamilton, who sings at the Armouries on Tuesday, 7th inst., is a soloist in one of the large churches in the "ambitious city."

The recital in Trinity Methodist church on the evening of Tuesday, 22nd ult., under the direction of Mr. W. Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O., assisted by Miss Joy Higgs, violiniste, and Miss Walton, vocalist, all of Belleville, was highly appreciated by a large audience, composed of the principal music lovers of Napanea. The programme included such favorite numbers as: "Meditation"—Massant; "Angels Serenade"—Braga; "Baccaralle"—Offenbach; "Humoresque"—Dvorak, by Miss Joy Higgs, while the rendition of: "Operatic Overture"—Suppe; "Suite Gothic in C minor" by Boellman; "Meuse Regiments Official March" by Genit, displayed the ability of Mr. Wheatley, as an organist. His "Flute Concerto" by Rink, clearly showed the effectiveness of the flute stop with an orchestral accompaniment, while De Beriot's "Concerto in D" exemplified the artistic interpretation of the composer by Miss Higgs, as a violiniste, and we do not hesitate to state that a better piano accompaniment has seldom been heard here.

Miss Walton's solos were well received. She possesses a sweet mezzo-soprano voice of good tonal qualities.

Those who were not permitted to attend, missed a rare musical treat, and the Ladies' Aid are to be congratulated.

Mr. Wheatley plays before the Duke and Duchess of Connaught on Friday, 3rd inst., at Ottawa.

"The Diamond from the Sky" at Wonderland, March 3.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the Daughters of the Empire.

We have recently had the satisfaction of receiving a communication direct from a prisoner of war in Germany, acknowledging, and thanking us for a parcel received from the above Committee. The man is a member of the 1st Royal Montreal Regiment, and the prison-camp Doeberitz. This message only goes to show our wisdom in taking up the case of the prisoners of war in Germany last August, since which time, we have been supporting four prisoners, not otherwise cared for; as has been previously announced in these columns.

We are now pleased to state, that lately, another name has been added to the list, which will probably grow, as people begin to realize the humanity of this work, and the satisfaction one feels in doing something, however little, for some of those who have sacrificed their all for us—even liberty itself. It is hoped that this week will see the returns made of all blue knitting, all left-over navy blue wool, and all scarves; as well as the six or seven grey army flannel shirts still out.

On Thursday, the 9th March, we hope to see at our room, all our members, workers and well-wishers, and those interested in the second Motor Ambulance from Lennox and Addington.

On this day also, we shall commemorate the anniversary of Paardeberg in the usual manner; and hope to make the occasion interesting to all.

We must again commend Mrs. Homer Miles for the splendid way in which she has made-up and finished a large number of our day shirts, and hospital night-shirts, also Mrs. Kilpatrick, who continues to send us in samples of her beautiful socks; and a mother and daughter in the neighborhood of our town, who are on their 21st pair.

Our room is open each Thursday and Saturday afternoon for the reception and distribution of work until 5.30 o'clock. All are asked to bring their knitting, as the cry continues to be socks, socks, and more socks!

THE HISTORICAL MEETING.

At the regular meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society on Thursday evening, February 24th, Prof. O. D. Skelton, head of the Political Science Department of Queen's University, Kingston, was the lecturer. His subject was "The Races of Europe." The lecture was out of the ordinary line and perhaps a little too technical to be called popular, however there was food for much thought in what Prof. Skelton said and by means of his lantern slides he made a rather difficult subject clearer for his audience. In the absence of the President, Mr. Herrington occupied the chair and appropriately thanked the guest for his kindness in coming to the Society and delivering his lecture. An audience which completely filled the hall
